TODAY'S GAME:

WESTERN WASHINGTON vs. CENTRAL WASHINGTON

In a contest where records are meaningless, the Western Washington University football team entertains Central Washington University this afternoon in Evergreen Conference (Evco) action at Civic Stadium.

The rivalry between the two schools has grown in intensity ever since they first met in 1922. This is their 66th confrontation (most the Vikings have had with any opponent) with Central holding a 36-25-4 series advantage.

Western is 2-4 overall and Central 1-5, both teams being 0-2 in Evco play. Included in each of their ledgers is a forfeit victory from Whitworth College (due to the use of an ineligible player).

Last year the Wildcats finished 1-8-1, their only win coming over Western 17-9. That is the lone legitimate victory they have had in 27 games (had to forfeit three wins in 1978).

"We had better be up," stated head Coach Boyde Long. "We gave them their only win last year and I don't want to give them their first one on the field this season."

"They don't seem to be very good offensively, but they're fair defensively."

Western lost 35-6 to five-time defending league champion Oregon College of Education last week. That snapped its home field winning streak at four.

Oregon College took advantage of Viking errors to score four of its five touchdowns. The Wolves reached paydirt on short drives set up on a pass interception and a fumble recovery. They also broke off a 74-yard run and an 84-yard punt return.

"It was our mistakes that beat us," Long said. "They only had one long drive."

"Overall the defense did a good job as they (OCE) can really do it to you offensively. But the problem was us breaking down the way we did."

Western's only touchdown came on a four-yard run by reserve quarterback Jon Christie, who is normally a kicker and a starting wide receiver. He was pressed into action throughout the contest as veteran signal-caller Dave Blue fought off the effects of a nagging foot injury (freshman quarterback Eric Ummel was lost for the season as he suffered a serious shoulder separation against Southern Oregon).

"It's right in the worst part of the foot — on the top," said Long of Blue's injury. "There isn't anything you can do about it, like tape it. It's not like a sprain, it's just that it's tender."

"Christie did a remarkable job considering that he had only run the offense for a week."

Christie's six-pointer moved him into second place on the Vikings' all-time career scoring list with 131 points. He now trails only Pat Locker (162, 1976-79).

Wingback Bill Handy leads Western in four offensive categories, including pass-receiving (30 catches for 425 yards and 3 TDs), rushing, punt returns and kickoff returns. His all-purpose yardage total is 806.

Linebacker Tom Houvener continues as the tackle leader with 81. He is followed by tackle Doug Groves, who has 51 stops (tops squad with seven quarterback sacks and four fumble recoveries), despite missing last week's game due to a back injury.

Central is coming off a 37-0 loss to Eastern Oregon State College, which is ranked 15th nationally in NAIA Division I. Its other losses have been to Linfield College (ranked second in NAIA Division II) 30-2, Simon Fraser University (plays a number of NCAA Division I schools) 25-11, Pacific Lutheran University (ranked number one in NAIA Division II) 24-3 and Oregon Tech (rated 12th in NAIA Division I pre-season poll) 21-0.

The Wildcat defense has done a credible job against some very potent offenses. Leading that unit for Coach Tom Parry (15th year) is linebacker Tim Kofstad (68 tackles and two pass interceptions). Other standouts are nose guard Earl Azeltine, end Mike Studer and tackle Brian Thompson.

Central's offense has scored just three touchdowns this season. Three players have alternated at quarterback in hopes of getting the attack going, including junior Jon Eagle (25 of 51, 249 yards), freshman Paul Peerboom (35 of 76, 370 yards) and sophomore Gregg Wilbanks (26 of 52, 216 yards).

Tailback C.D. Hoiness (281 yards) heads the ground-gainers, while tight end Chris Olsen (16 catches for 184 yards) tops the pass-receivers.

Central is averaging 213 yards a game (67 rushing and 146 passing), while giving up 333 (218 rushing and 114 passing).

VIKING NOTES: Ron Ladines, whose son Chris started at fullback for Western against Oregon College, was a three-time All-Evco choice for the Vikings (1959-61), leading the team in rushing in 1959 (493 yards) and 1960 (420 yards) . . . Western ranks 14th nationally in passing offense (194.2 avg.). The Vikings are averaging 295 yards per contest in total offense, while giving up 317 . . . Western defensive Coach John Craig handled those same duties at Central last year . . . Blue, who earlier this fall broke school career standards for pass completions (309) and attempts (671), is within striking distance of three other such marks, including yards passing (3826-4298), total plays (1012-1034) and total yards (4255-4703).

GROVES AND MASSEY TRAVEL SAME PATH

By Craig Bennett

Four years ago, Doug Groves and Lance Massey left high school on seemingly divergent football paths. Reunited at Western Washington University last season they are termed "the best pair of defensive tackles I've had here" by Coach Boyde Long, now in his 11th year as head mentor.

"We've had some good ones before," Long continued, "but never two at the same time. The pass rush these guys generate really makes it hard for the opposition to get the ball off."

Their play helped Western rank second among Northwest small colleges in pass defense (128.6 avg.) last year. That figure was the school's best since 1973 and the third lowest in 15 seasons.

During one three-game stretch, the stop unit allowed only 23 points as the Vikings defeated Whitworth 14-7, Pacific 17-7 and Southern Oregon 10-9.

"That (defense) was most certainly our strength," said Long. "And if people perform up to their capabilities, I think the defense can play the entire season as well as it did at times last year."

For that to happen Groves and Massey must play well, according to Long.

"I think they're the key," he said. "When you go with only three down linemen, the tackles have to do their jobs well."

Western's defense is geared for the inside linebackers to make the majority of tackles. It is the task of the linemen to keep the way clear for them to make those hits.

"Their (tackles) main responsibility is to control their area," said Long. "That's why they can do their job extremely well and still not lead in tackles."

"There's no doubt that in any game you want very badly to get to the quarterback," Massey explained. "There's nothing more fun than getting a sack. But everybody has a job to do. If you want to win, you can't have one or two people trying to grab the glory."

"You have to have a strong rush," Groves added. "The backs can't stay with the receivers forever. You don't have to tackle the quarterback, just put pressure on him — make him think that he has to get rid of the ball."

Groves and Massey were both three-sport lettermen at Nooksack Valley High School, each receiving all-league honors in football.

After graduation in 1977, Groves came to Western and Massey accepted a scholarship offer from Idaho State University.

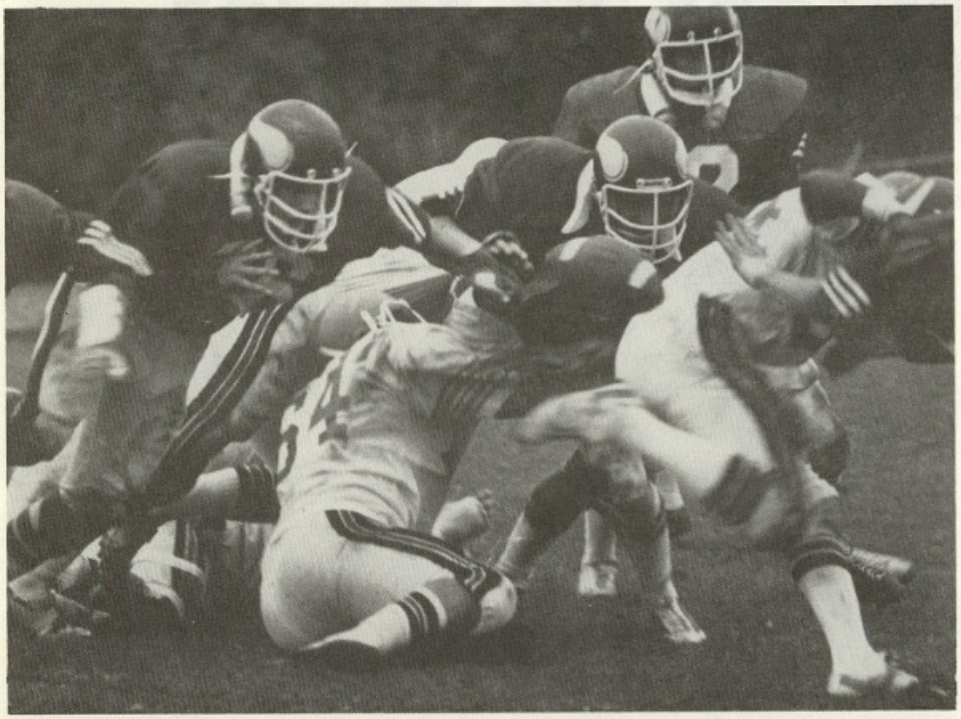

Massey (6-3, 230) started in each of his two years with the Bengals before transferring to Western.

Groves (6-1, 210) played an end position as a freshman and sophomore, but moved to tackle after two games last season. He adapted easily and was a Little All-Northwest choice at that position.

"I liked the change," said Groves. "There's always some action at tackle, you're always hitting somebody. The transition wasn't difficult, it was kind of fun."

Both seniors are strong and quick. But while Groves uses brute force to manhandle opponents, Massey relies more on technique.

Though the styles may differ slightly, the results are the same. Today, Groves and Massey travel the same path — straight to the opponent's quarterback.

CHRISTIE USES FOOT TO PERFORM GRID FEATS

By Craig Bennett

As a youngster Jon Christie saw soccer as a fun way to fill in the time between other sports seasons. Little did he realize that the style he developed then would help him become the finest place-kicker in the history of Western Washington University football.

The senior from Bellingham already holds 14 school records. Included among them are booting four field goals in one game and kicking one three-pointer from 44 yards out.

"I really don't think about breaking records," said Christie. "When I'm on the field and need to make a kick, I feel as though I can because I do it all the time in practice."

"If it doesn't work I try not to let it get me down, although my immediate reaction is that I let the team down. But you can only do the best you can."

"Every kick is a new one," continued the 21-year-old Christie. "You have to keep proving yourself over and over again. When I'm called in, I know that I just have one chance. I don't want to miss ever."

Explaining the difference between his soccer style of kicking and the conventional straight-on method, Christie said, "I approach the ball from the side so as to bring into use my whole body rather than just my leg. Using this method, I have more power and better control."

Christie has led Western in scoring the past two years and was runnerup as a freshman. Having made 19 of 40 field goal attempts and 54 of 60 extra point tries, his career point total stands at 111.

"He's one of those people you just hate to lose," said head Coach Boyde Long, "one of those where you suddenly realize that four years have gone by just like that."

"To be fair to Jon, he would be even more effective as a kicker if we would let him concentrate on one thing," Long added. "I hope this year that we can get someone else to help out with the punting."

It is indeed a difficult chore to handle all the kicking duties without having some problems.

"Going from place-kicking to punting means a transition from soccer to conventional style," said Christie. "My punting isn't as strong as my place-kicking. Anything around 39 yards is good and I'm working toward that. My technique is erratic sometimes. I get self-satisfied with my ability to kick at times, thinking that punting will take care of itself. But it won't."

As a freshman at Western, Christie connected on 25 of 26 point-after tries, including 24 straight. He also made a 44-yard field goal in a 38-21 triumph over Oregon Tech.

The following season Christie scored a team-high 42 points, accounting for 14 in a 26-17 victory over Oregon Tech with four field goals (33, 34, 27 and 34 yards) and two extra points. The 5-11, 170-pounder also punted seven times for a 37.5 average.

But perhaps his biggest thrill during that campaign was kicking a game-winning PAT in the fourth quarter of a 20-19 upset of nationally-ranked Oregon College.

Last year Christie earned NAIA District I all-star and honorable mention Little All-Northwest honors as he again led the squad with 35 points. His 29-yard field goal beat Southern Oregon 10-9 and his three extra points were the difference in a 27-24 triumph over Eastern Oregon.

Besides his kicking and punting duties, Christie has been practicing with the Viking wide receivers the past two years. He made two catches in last season's opener against Simon Fraser, but saw little action thereafter.

"Jon was probably one of our top four receivers," said Long, "but we didn't play him as much because we were fearful that he would get hurt and then there goes our kicking game."

"Since he's a senior we'll play him as much as possible and keep our fingers crossed that he doesn't get banged up. He should be one of our starting wide receivers."

Christie has little doubt that he can contribute as a receiver.

"I think kickers should do more," said Christie. "I just love what Efren Herrera and the Seattle Seahawks do. I'd love to do it — it would be fun."

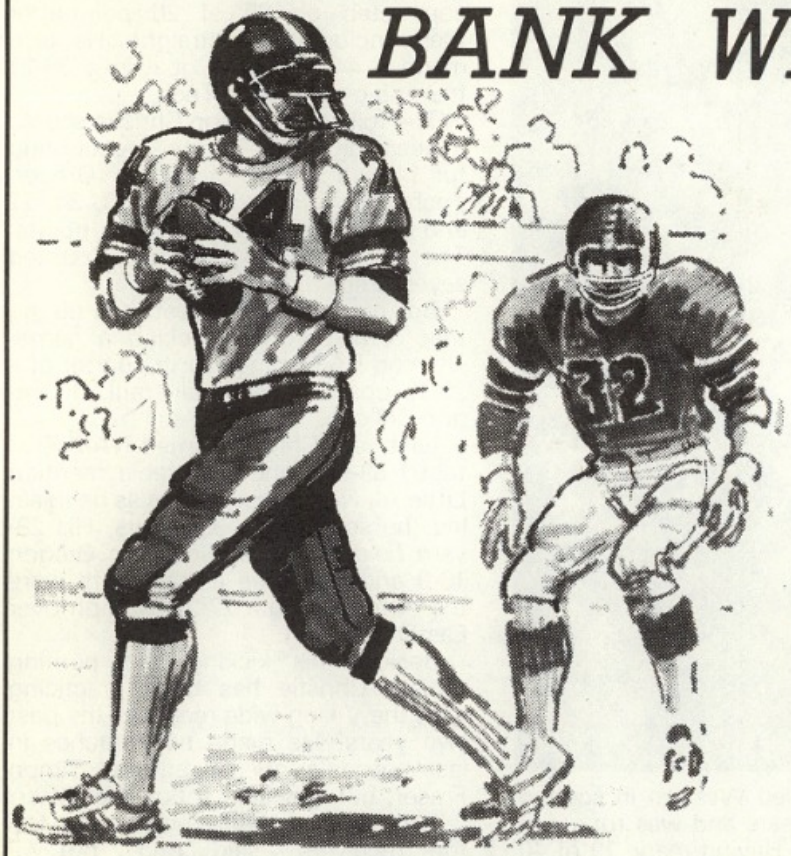

Despite all his kicking accomplishments, Christie has his eye on one more, the elusive 50-yard field goal.

"Hey, I've hit them in practice," said Christie. "It's just a matter of running into the proper conditions in a game. All it takes is a good snap and hold, my leg's strong enough."

"He's kicking with more consistency and power than ever this fall," Long stated. "I have no qualms about going for a field goal from that distance."

Meeting the challenge of change.

BOYDE LONG FINDS PLAYERS JUST FOLKS

By Scott Sandsberry
sportswriter, Bellingham Herald

Boyde Long went expecting to see barbed-wire-concentration-camp. He saw instead slap-happy-day-camp.

He went expecting the back door shuffle. He was welcomed instead with the red carpet smile.

He went expecting to see the Dallas Cowboys, Robots. He saw instead the Dallas Cowboys, People — and from a lot closer vantage point than he could have imagined: "I was allowed to do anything, basically, but coach."

When Long, head coach of the Western Washington University football team, took off for Thousand Oaks, Calif., and a four-day stay at the Dallas Cowboys summer training camp, he had no great expectations. "Who am I, really? Just a guy from an NAIA school in Washington," he said.

"Those guys didn't have to do me any special favors or go out of their way to help me out. I've been a Dallas fan for years, but I never thought they'd treat me like that. They treated me so special, like I was somebody."

Everybody, from the coaches to General Manager Gil Brandt, was on a first-name basis with Long from his first day at the camp. Unlike the 2,000-plus tourists that watched the practices daily from the stands — buying souvenirs and concessions from nearby booths — Long was allowed to roam free around the practice sessions, listen in on huddles, study the Cowboys' extensive playbook . . . and shatter a few of his delusions about who and what the Dallas Cowboys are all about.

"I absolutely thought it would be like a concentration camp," he said, shaking his head. "I thought they would be really stiff, almost robots. Hey, they were anything but that. They're goofing around, loose, cracking jokes — but when it's time to get serious, they are. I thought like everybody else thinks about the Cowboys, that you wind them up and send them out on the field, but it's nothing like that.

"And Landry, everybody talks about how aloof and serious he is supposed to be. He's anything but aloof."

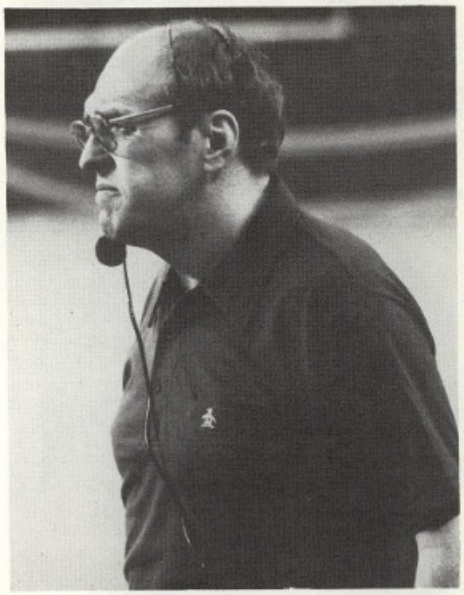

But what impressed Long more than his own corrected misconceptions was the professionalism he encountered in Thousand Oaks.

"All they do is teach," Long marveled. "There's very little scrimmage, very little all-out contact. There's so much teaching and everybody knows his own responsibilities, what is required of him. I never heard a coach raise his voice, and I never once heard a player complain about anything. The whole thing was just a first-class operation.

"I'd heard a lot of stuff about their players, like how Dorsett was supposed to be such a hot dog. But I'll tell you — that guy's a worker."

The teaching aspect — the attitude that no technique can ever be learned "too much" — is something Long hopes to incorporate into his own Viking workouts. "I think a lot of times as coaches, we get into a rut. We're concerned with offense and defense and strategies, and a lot of times we forget we have to teach these people these things. I mean, look at Dallas — they've got maybe the second-best front four in football, but they're constantly teaching those guys their system, refining it down to the smallest detail. Footwork, everything."

Long felt a certain amount of pride in watching the Dallas Cowboys doing some of the same things his own Western teams have been doing for years, "and that made me feel like, hey, we're not so far off in what we're doing." Like the Cowboys' famous "flex" defense, certain aspects of which the Vikings have used in the past. Like some of the Cowboys' patterns in the secondary. Like the business-like approach to preparing for a game.

"I've never believed in rah-rah stuff, and that's not the Dallas way either," Long explained. "I think the best compliment ever paid me when I was playing was that I was a self-starter. A lot of coaches are emotional types, jumping up and down. After being there, in Thousand Oaks, it strengthens my feelings that you don't need that kind of stuff."

After going to Thousand Oaks, Long will never again be the same when he watches the Cowboys play on television. "Now I've been there, I've watched their drills up close, I've watched them work it out in practice, I know exactly what they do," he says. "And when I watch them on TV, it amazes me — they're doing it exactly the same way, exactly the way it's diagrammed. Very impressive."

Fresh from the Pacific Northwest,

IT'S SATURDAY NIGHT LIGHT!

We're one of the most important stops on campus.

Each year college students are different. And each year they are the same. They study when they have to, play when they can, and come to us for help with their banking.
