LORNE DAVIES
DIRECTOR OF ATHLETICS & RECREATION

Simon Fraser's success over the past 24 years speaks a great deal about the program's leadership.

Since becoming the Athletic Director when the university opened in 1965, Lorne Davies has been the architect behind a university renowned for striving and reaching the highest athletic achievement at all levels of competition.

An active supporter of amateur athletics (he is a trustee for the B.C. Sports Hall of Fame and Terry Fox Humanitarian Scholarship selection process), Davies is credited with having helped initiate athletic scholarships in Canada in an effort to keep Canadian athletes playing in this country.

His administrative foresight in developing athletic programs from scratch are matched only by his on-field coaching abilities.

For the first seven years Davies guided the Football Clan to a 34-21-1 record for a .620 winning percent and posted a 4-0-1 record against rival University of British Columbia. When he finished coaching in 1972, he had coached 41 Clansmen who would go on to play professionally in the Canadian Football League.

Before coming to Simon Fraser Davies previously coached with Western Washington University, University of Oregon, UBC and the B.C. Lions.

Davies and his wife June live in Port Coquitlam.

Message From Lorne Davies

Football has played an important part in establishing the athletic tradition of Simon Fraser University since its inception in 1965. We are extremely proud of the many outstanding young men who during the past twenty-four seasons have worn the red and blue of the Clan.

This year's Clansmen football team has spent many long hours in practices in preparation for the 1989 season. Their hard work and total dedication has developed a team that we all can be very proud of.

Your attendance at this game and your being here to encourage and cheer them on is greatly appreciated. It also means a great deal to the staff and coaches.

Thank you for your support.

The history of SFU and the NAIA

In 1969, Simon Fraser University became the first and only Canadian university to be granted membership in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics or NAIA.

Through this affiliation SFU competes against more than 540 universities and colleges from the United States for national championships and rankings and Clan athletes are eligible for All-America status. At the same time, Simon Fraser regularly schedules exhibition games against CIAU universities, maintaining its athletic link to the rest of Canada.

The reasons why SFU chose to join the NAIA were both philosophical and practical.

The late Dr. Gordon Shrum, the founder and then Chancellor of the university, along with current Athletics and Recreation Director Lorne Davies decided that in an effort to keep Canadian student-athletes in Canada Simon Fraser would offer athletic scholarships when the university opened its door in 1965. At that time, no other university in Canada offered scholarships to outstanding Canadian athletes.

The high level of competition found at universities and colleges in the United States along with attractive geographical (proximity to top flight competition) and financial (lower travel costs) considerations influenced Simon Fraser to join the NAIA.

The decision has yielded nothing but positive consequences as Simon Fraser and its student-athletes have become renown for a high level of achievement nationally, internationally and on the Olympic stage.

NAIA Membership

Any four-year college or university or upper-level, two-year institution in the United States and Canada that awards the Bachelor's degree or equivalent may hold membership.

FRESHMEN TO WATCH

Brian Patenaude

Turning down a full scholarship to an American School isn't easy, but that was the choice Brian made in order to attend S.F.U. After his senior year at Notre Dame high school in Welland, Ont., where Brian captained his team to the league championship finals, Patenaude found himself being wooed by Canadian and American schools alike. Simon Fraser's strong football tradition and reputable Kinesiology program was the combination Brian was seeking. At 6-foot -2, 250-pounds Brian relys on his strenth (400-pound bench press) and surprising quickness to overpower his opponents.

Bruce Reid

When Bruce suits up for the Clansmen this season he will join older brother, Columbia Football Association all-star Mark, on the S.F.U. roster. After three years of high school football at Vancouver College, the younger Reid was attracted to S.F.U. by the opportunity to play against high quality American competition. Head coach Chris Beaton says, "pound for pound there is not a tougher kid in the province than Bruce Reid,". Beaton's enthusiasm will skyrocket if Bruce, playing fullback, is able to demonstrate that toughness plowing through holes created by his elder sibling.

Steve Delazzari

At Notre Dame high school in Vancouver, Steve enjoyed success last year in the form of a B.C. high school championship. This year Steve made the decision to stay close to home and bring his multi-talents to S.F.U.. Delazzari can play both linebacker and fullback for the Clan. With hopes of one day becoming a lawyer, Delazzari should be able to use his 6-foot, 196-pound frame to make his presence felt both on the field and in the courts.

Greg Frers

With only one year of competative football under his belt and plans to play a new position this year, skepticism may describe a first impression of Greg Frers - off the field. But as the saying goes, the game is won on the field, and that is where the soft spoken South Delta grad will erase all disbelief. Switching from running back to defensive back during the B.C. Lion's development camp proved to be Frer's ticket to S.F.U. Named the top defensive back in camp and winning a Jim Young scholarship, Beaton says Frers, "is one of the best defensive backs to come through the Lion's (Development) camp in years." Greg plans to become a high school teacher, but for the next four years he will also have to concentrate on learning the ins and outs of the defensive backfield.

Paul Pakulak

After two successive B.C. high school championships as captain of the Notre Dame Jugglers, Paul found himself with enough talent and experience to continue his career on a university grid-iron. S.F.U.'s Kinesiology program and football tradition swayed Pakulak's decision to stay close to home. The 6-foot 3-inch, 205-pound tight end impresses coach Chris Beaton, "He is a great athlete and brings a lot of intensity to the field. He is very similar to (former Clansmen and C.F.L. all-star) Glen Jackson."
While Pakulak's talent extends to a basketball court and track oval at S.F.U., he has decided to focus on football and pre-medicine requirements.

Making Up For Lost Time

Courtesy of the Kamloops News

By Iain MacIntyre

Carey McDonald is trying not to look back at spent years as he runs forward into the Simon Fraser University Clansmen football record book.

The Kamloops Westsyde Secondary School graduate is among the best fullbacks in Canadian college football. Unfortunately, at 25, he's also the oldest.

And that will likely rob him of a professional career when he graduates this year from the Burnaby school. In the meantime, he is helping re-write several Clansmen rushing records.

"I've often thought about that, but you can't really look back and say what if," McDonald said, referring to two years he spent out of school after he graduated from Westsyde in 1981. "I think I probably needed the maturity to come back for the academic part. But I'm enjoying my time right now. Going for it all."

Since McDonald will be 26 when he graduates from arts with a degree in criminology, it's unlikely any Canadian Football League teams will be interested in signing him.

McDonald, who spent this summer fighting forest fires around Kamloops, said he hasn't decided what he will do when his football career ends.

The apparent lack of a future in football, however, isn't stopping the six-foot, 205-pounder from erasing past records at SFU.

With McDonald leading the way through and around the line, Sean Millington ran for 1043 yards, breaking the school's single season rushing record of 980 yards, set in 1987 by Orville Lee, the CFL's 1988 rookie of the year with Ottawa. McDonald also blocked for Lee, and is entering his fourth year of football at SFU.

Senior full back Carey McDonald fights both opposing tacklers and B.C.'s forest fires.

"He's great. I don't think I'd have had the year I had if it wasn't for the kind of blocking I got," Millington said. "I think we work well together. He realizes if it wasn't for him, I wouldn't be doing what I'm doing."

McDonald has done as well with the ball as without, picking up 147 yards on 33 carries. But he has no illusions about his role, and is happy to make a university career out of dismantling opposition linebackers and defensive backs.

"I actually like the position of fullback," he said. "I've never really given it (playing tailback) much thought. I'm pretty satisfied with the way things have been going.

"When I know there's an outside sweep and I'm taking on the linebacker, I get pumped up."

McDonald thrives on the image of fullbacks being head-butting, in-your-face-buddy, ball carriers and blockers, compared to tailbacks, which he agreed have an image of being fast guys who do lots of prancing.

"That kind of image is portrayed," McDonald said. "For example, there were a few minor injuries in the backfield to some of the tailbacks last season. At the time, none of the fullbacks had been injured. We were kind of joking how the fullbacks go in there and stick their heads in, always driving into the line. The tailbacks are razzle dazzle."

Offensive co-ordinator Terry Bailey said McDonald is the Clansmen's unsung hero.

"He goes in and pays the price, and nobody except the coaches and players notice," Bailey said. "But he's the guy that makes our offence work."

Over the past year, Nick Mazzoli has greatly enhanced his chances of becoming a professional football player.

The 20-year-old Markham, Ont., resident completed his sophomore season for the Simon Fraser University Clansmen and although the team compiled a less-than-impressive overall record of 3-7, Mazzoli managed to sparkle with some spectacular play.

The five-foot, 10-inch, 175-pound wide receiver caught 40 passes for a total of 823 yards. Nine of these receptions went for touchdowns.

That gave Mazzoli 54 points for the season and allowed him to tie the Clansmen's place kicker Lorne Hofseth for top spot in the team's scoring.

The Clansmen have long been recognized as one of the top sources of Canadian talent for the Canadian Football League. Mazzoli says he wants to follow in the footsteps of former Clansmen superstars.

"I have intentions of turning pro," he says. "And I'm sure my play last year turned some heads."

Mazzoli also established a new school record for receiving in an October game against Western Oregon State College.

He caught six passes—two of which were 56 and 67 yards and went for touchdowns—for a total of 210 yards. This surpassed the previous mark of 204 yards receiving in a game which had been set by Tony Dennis in 1984.

"This year has given me confidence to know I can compete at this level," Mazzoli says of his goal to play professionally.

"I'm not in such awe of the play in this league anymore. Now it's more of a challenge to see if I can keep this up."

Nick Mazzoli, a junior wide receiver, is on track for another big season.

Mazzoli, who is studying kinesiology at SFU, has two more years of university ball remaining before he is eligible to be drafted.

One person who believes he has the potential to make it as a pro is the Clansmen's head coach Chris Beaton.

"Nick's chances of making it to pro are pretty good," he says. "He just has to continue to channel his talents in the right direction."

Mazzoli's performance last season was no surprise for Beaton, who was familiar with his receiver's talents when he recruited him out of Markham District High School.

"He's got the ability to turn a normal catch into a big play," Beaton says.

"And everytime he touches the ball he has the chance of breaking it for a TD."

Perfect Timing

Courtesy of the Etobicoke Guardian

By Steve McAllister

Good timing is essential for a quarterback to be successful. But in Giulio Caravatta's case, timing hasn't been limited to sideline patterns and picking up blitzes.

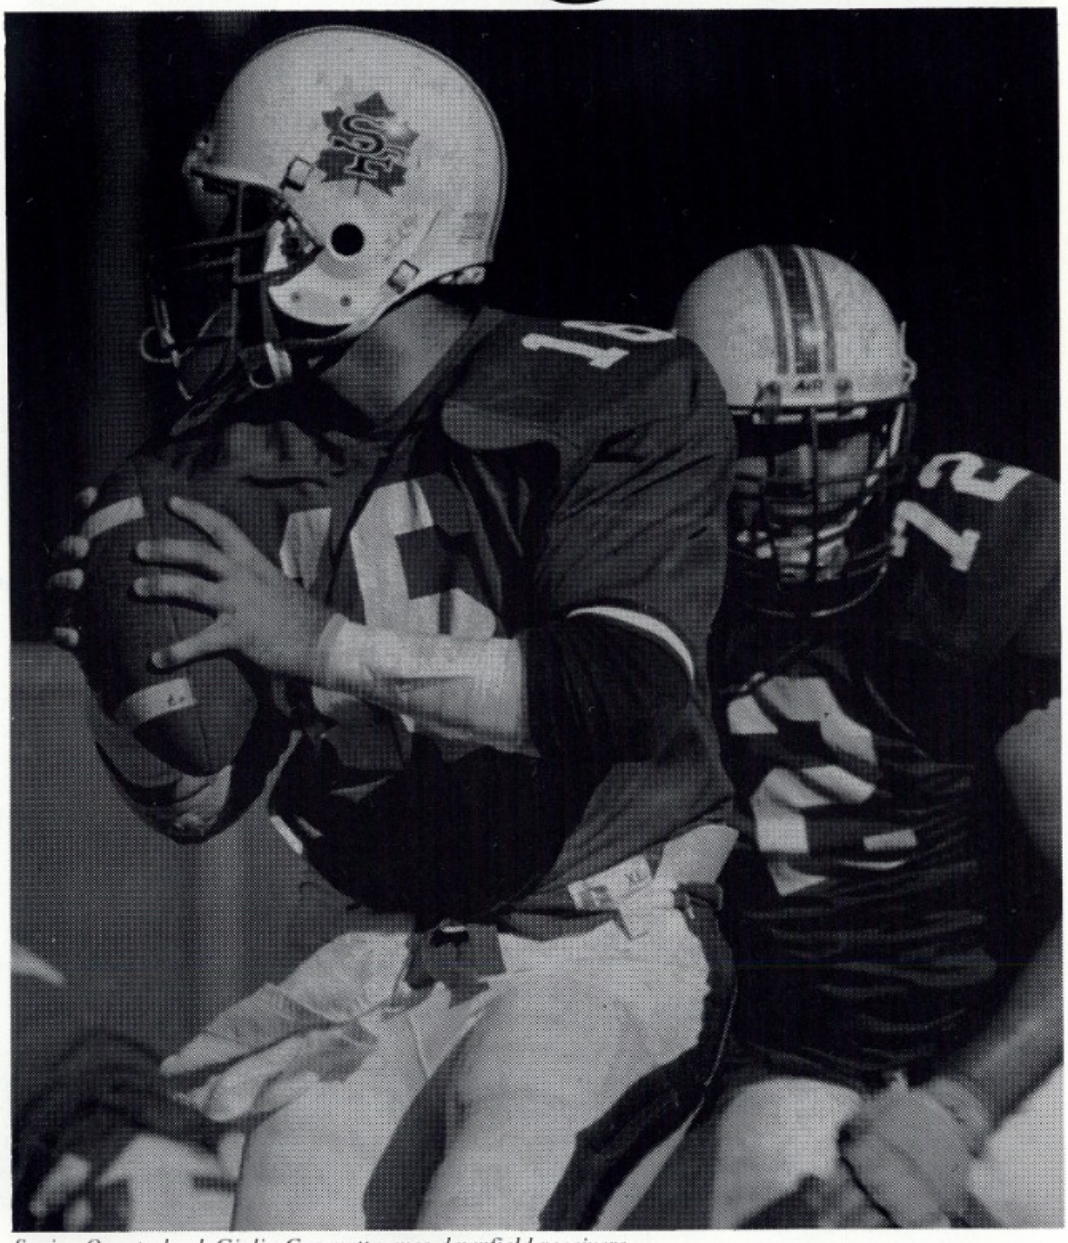

Caravatta admits finding the better life in football has included being in the right place at the right time. For now, however, the 22 year old graduate of Scarlett Heights Collegiate is content as quarterback and punter for the Simon Fraser Clansmen.

A third-string quarterback two years ago and a part-timer last year, Caravatta has inherited the starting role this season from the graduated Darryn Trainor. Caravatta was waiting in the wings when Trainor, a league all-star in 1986, separated his shoulder. SFU's backup pivot struggled and Caravatta unexpectedly found himself in the starter's role as a sophomore.

"I was ready to go then because practising had reached a point where I wasn't learning anymore," said the six-foot-one, 220 pound senior.

When Trainor went down, Caravatta proved he was ready, completing 52 percent of his passes for 1,500 yards, and throwing 15 touchdowns passes in six games. His best performance came Nov . 7 when he completed 27 of 41 passes for 321 yards and four touchdowns in a 29-28 victory over the University of Puget Sound.

He also broke the school record for longest punt with a 76-yard effort against Western Washington and finished the 1986 season leading the league in net punting yards. Not bad for someone that was picked to punt when a coach was looking out a window and saw Caravatta kicking in his freshman year.

Senior Quarterback Giulio Caravatta eyes downfield receivers.

"I hadn't punted since grade 10. When they asked me. I thought 'great, I can make the road trips now," he quipped.

Trainor recovered from his injury, and instead of sitting on the sidelines, coach Chris Beaton decided to alternate his quarterbacks.

Last season Caravatta and Trainor again "shared time" and Caravatta said the two-quarterback arrangement was a catch-22.

"It would have been better if there was only one guy playing, but I wouldn't have wanted to be the guy left out," said Caravatta.

He won't be "left out" this season. As a starting pivot in a one-quarterback system, he is a vital cog in the Clansmen's offensive scheme of things.

"We only lost two offensive starters (including Trainor) and our entire defensive secondary is back. Everyone is looking forward to this season," he says.

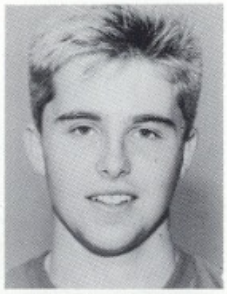

Simon Fraser would like nothing better than to see Caravatta play a leading role as a senior, hopefully getting the school to a league crown. And what about a professional career?

"That can't be first and foremost. If you're in a position to get drafted, that's fantastic. I'm getting a good education and I'm happy with that," reasoned Caravatta.

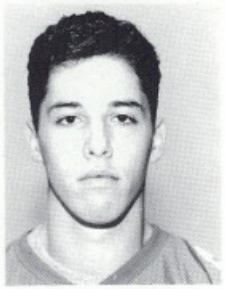

It will probably depend on timing.

Running For Glory

A year ago Sean Millington exposed a large vacuum in Simon Fraser University's football past: no running back had ever rushed for 1000-yards.

With players like Terry Bailey, Rick House, Barry Houlihan, Robert Reid and Orville Lee having at one time or another occupied the Clansmen back field, that may come as a suprise. Only Lee came close, flirting with the milestone in 1986 when he ran for 980-yards.

But Millington, a 6-foot-2, 220-pound bull-of-a-tailback, changed all that.

Last year he stepped in as the Clan's starting tailback, asked to replace the most explosive runner the school has ever seen in Lee, and he did, running for more yards than anyone before him.

Millington finished the 10-game season with 1043-yards, surpassing the efforts of all the previous great backs who have carried the ball for the Clansmen.

"My goal last year was the same as every running back who has played here. I wanted a 1000-yards," said Millington, who surpassed that total in his ninth game.

The previous school record belonged to Lee, the 1988 CFL Rookie of the Year with Ottawa Rough Riders.

"It was an honor to break Lee's record. He had some great years here at SFU," said Millington, who was Lee's back-up his first two seasons. "But you can't compare me to Lee or anyone else. Each year is different and there are different circumstances. Who knows what some of those guys may have done if they played here last year."

Millington's record running began in the 1988 Shrum Bowl where, getting the call for his first starting assignment, he rolled up 109 yards on 21 carries and was selected player of the game.

It was the begining of a remarkable season for the 21-year-old Carson Graham grad. By season's end he was averaging 5.2 yards a carry and 104.3 yards per game rushing for the 3-7 Clansmen, and ranked third in all-purpose running averaging 173.2 yards a game. Included in his highlight package is an 86-yard kick-off return for a touchdown.

Senior Sean Millington powered his way to a school record 1043 yards rushing in 1988.

"He (Millington) is just awesome," said Bailey, now SFU's offensive coordinator, and the man who held SFU's single season rushing record for 12 years before Lee came along.

"He's got incredible size and strength and he's blessed with great speed. He's not your classic back with the shifty moves. He's more wreckless and straight ahead." Bailey said.

"If he finds a crack through the line than there's no way someone can arm tackle him to bring him down. Forget it. Millington will carry him 10 or 15 yards."

"If I'm one-on-one in the middle of the field, I won't waste time trying to shift around a guy. I'll just run over him," said Millington, who is 15-pounds heavier than in his record setting year and recorded the Clan's fastest 40-yard time at 4.45 seconds.

He reported to training camp this season in what he says is the best shape of his life, with every intention of continuing on where he left off last year.

"If I don't run for more yards (than 1043) this season it will be a let down," said Millington. "I'm not here to rest on past laurels. I'm here to improve."

If he doesn't, rest assured. He has already filled a void left by Clansmen past.

Making A Name For Himself

You can't blame Mark Reid for being a little gun shy when it comes interviews. After all, he asks, "how often does the offensive line get noticed?

"You get no glory if you do a good job and if you screw up everyone points a finger," he says. "If your looking for headlines then you shouldn't be playing on the line."

Reid, a six-foot, 250-pound guard, is not bitter at playing his position in relative anonymity. No, he says, he accepts the lack of recognition as going with the territory and he's adjusted accordingly.

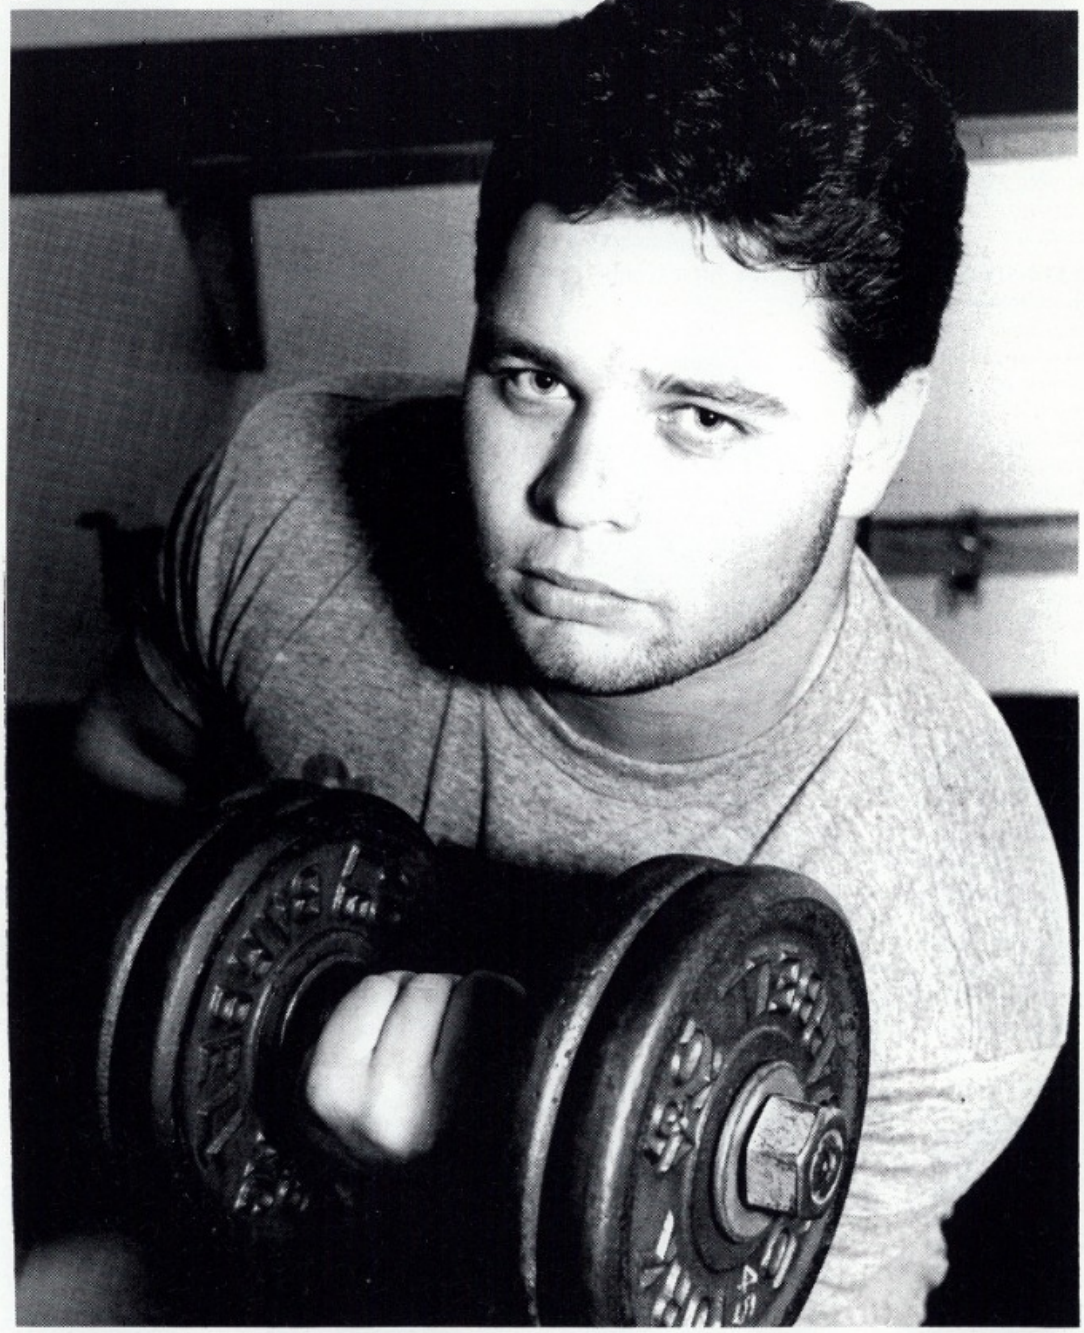

"I've never scored a touchdown and I probably never will but I don't care anymore," says Reid, a geography major. "I've learned to get satisfaction standing my man up and watching the running back go by or just driving him (defensive lineman) into the ground."

While the lack of acknowledgment is true for most lineman, times are changing for Reid, a 21-year-old senior and Clan captain. His play in the trenches is drawing considerable attention.

With Reid leading the way and Sean Millington right behind, the Clan tailback rushed for 1043 yards in 1988, establishing a university record. As is the case, Millington received all of the attention while Reid earned all-star recognition from Columbia Football Association coaches.

"You can have great running backs and great receivers but the 'O-line' makes it all happen. We are the heart and soul of the team. We have to play well for everything else to fall into place," says Reid, who blocked for running back Orville Lee during his two finest years at SFU.

This season, inaddition to Millington, Reid will open holes for younger brother Bruce, a freshman fullback and prize catch of the 1988 high school recruiting class.

Senior Clan captain Mark Reid gives the Clan a big lift along the offensive line.

"He's (Reid) got a great big heart and a tremendous work ethic," says coach Chris Beaton. "When you get guys like Mark on the line it allows you to do so much more offensively."

After earning top lineman honors at the B.C. Lions development camp four years ago as a high school senior at Vancouver College, Reid played his first year with the Clan at linebacker.

Despite making the travelling roster and playing special teams, his lack of size (212-pounds) and speed necessitated a switch to the offensive line.

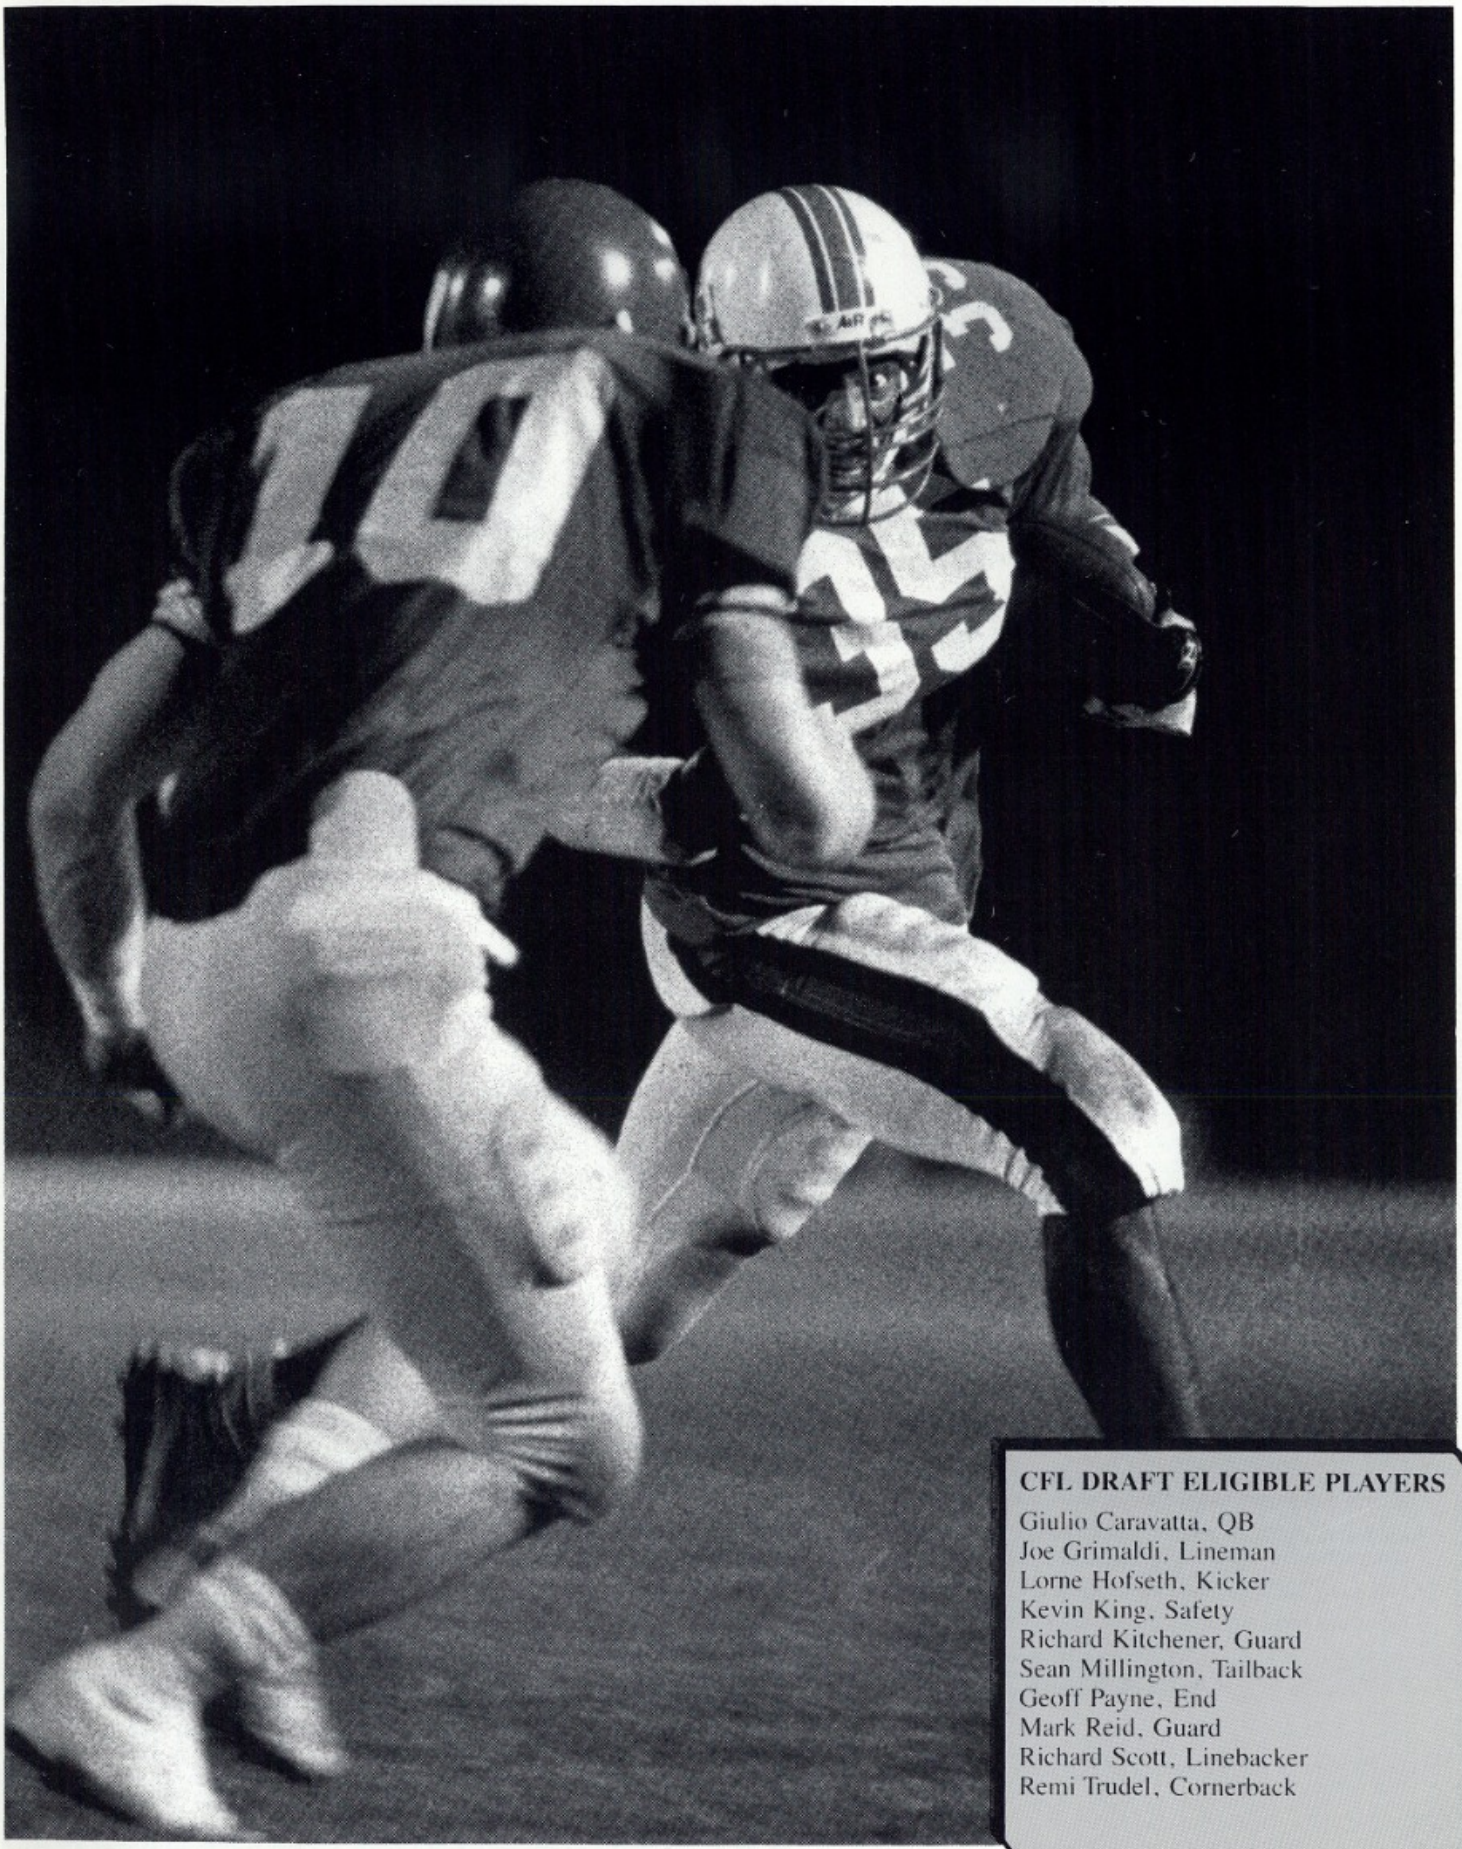

"I was a lousey linebacker," says Reid. "When Beaton told me he was switching me to the line I thought they (were) trying to get rid of me.

"But as soon as I made the move it was like I had found my natural position and I started the next year."

Reid has been a fixture along the offensive line ever since, refining his technique and building strength. Now 245-pounds and a member of the Clan's 400 Club (players who bench press inexcessive of 400-pounds) Reid is working towards another goal.

"I want to play pro football more than anything to challenge myself," says Reid. "I'll give it a few years (in the CFL) to see if I can make it."

On The Job Training

There wasn't a sign on coach Chris Beaton's door that read 'no experience necessary' the day Remi Trudel visited Simon Fraser University.

But Trudel, then a 17-year-old freshman with no previous high school football experience and only community ball in his background, applied anyway.

A part-time tailback and part-time defensive back with the Prince George Raiders Trudel tucked a lion's courage into his 5-foot-9, 163-pound frame and with no scholarship offer, walked out onto the field for football training camp with the Clan.

"I had never seen so many big guys in my life," said Trudel. "At first I was kinda intimidated and wondered what I was doing here, but after a couple of practices I realized these guys weren't any better than me."

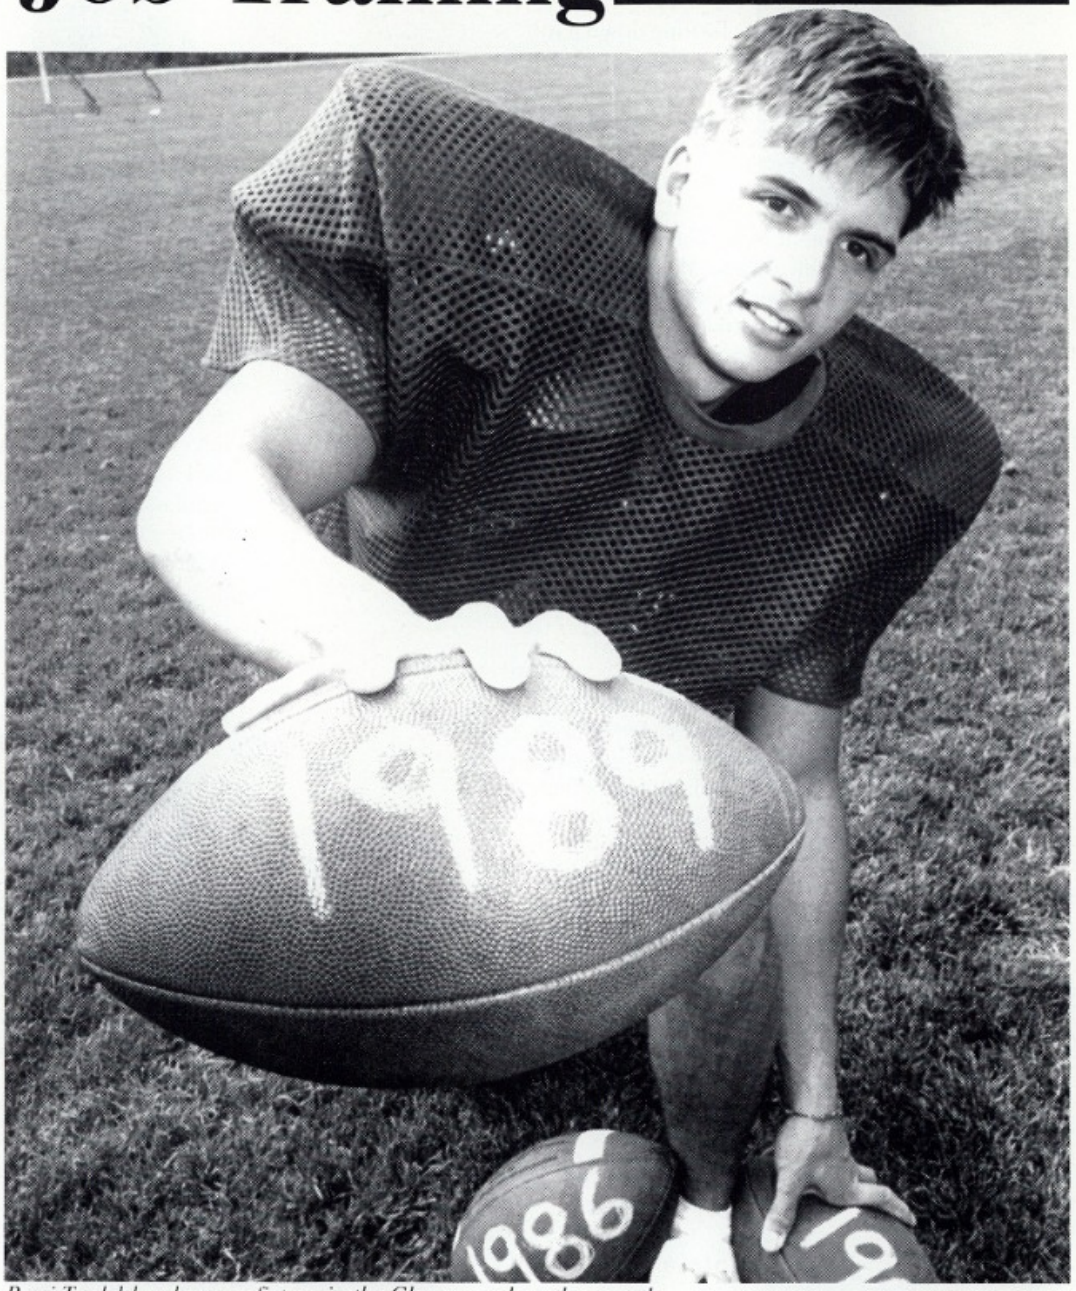

"We took a look at his size and the fact that we really knew nothing about him and we didn't think he could play," remembered Beaton.

"But after a few practices his athleticism really showed. Now he's our best cover man. I feel we can match him with any receiver in this league," Beaton said.

Any self-doubt Trudel may have had about his own abilities early on was gone four games into his first season. Trudel walked out on to the field for the first time as a Clansman, this time as the starting right cornerback against defending national champion Linfield College.

Now 20-years-old, Trudel is a rare commodity in college football—a true senior and four year starter.

"When you really think about it, coming out of a non-competitive football background and starting four years is amazing," says Beaton.

Remi Trudel has been as fixture in the Clan secondary the past three seasons.

Despite his diminutive stature Trudel has been a fixture in the Clan secondary, starting every game for the past three seasons, except those first four games of his rookie year when he learned his trade.

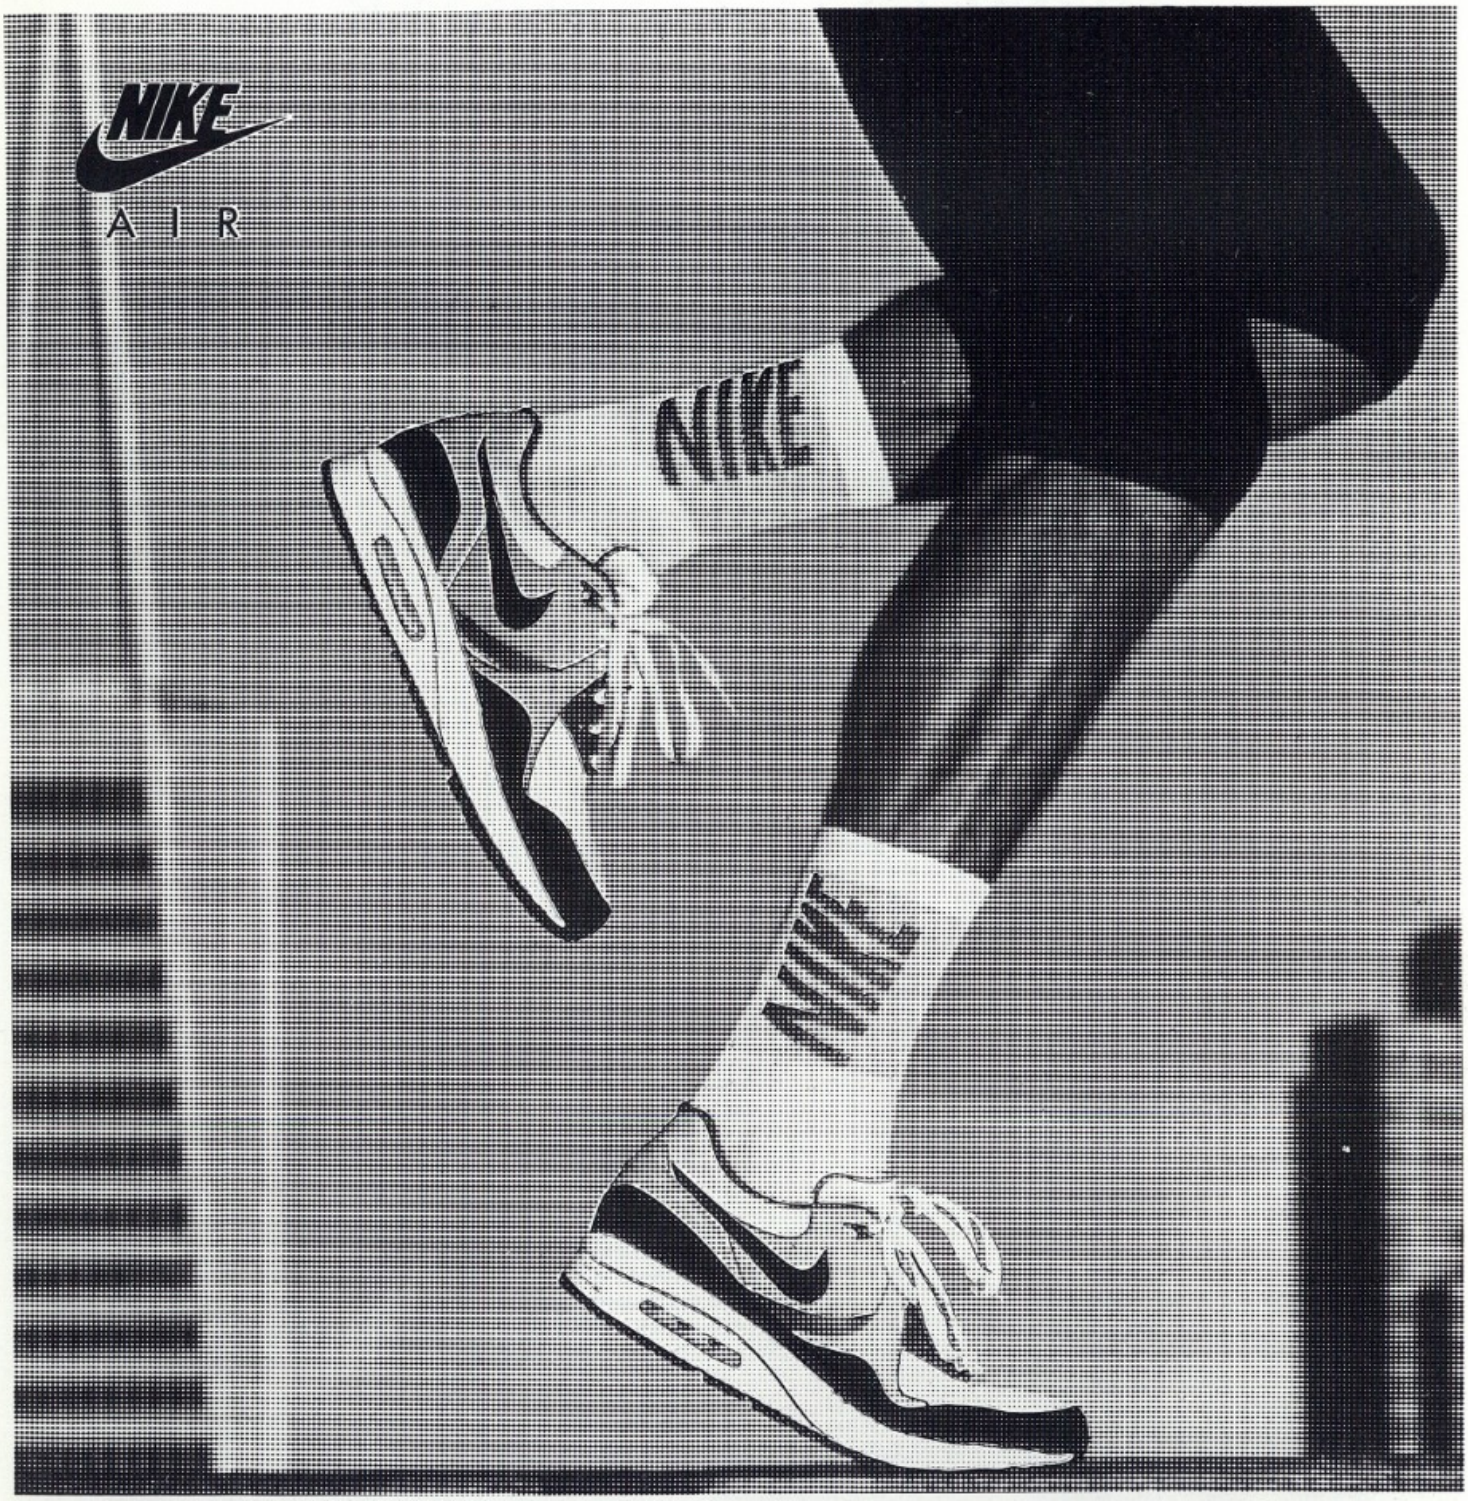

"When I came here the coaches gave me a look at running back but we had Orville (Lee) then, so they moved me to the corner thinking the more bodies the better," Trudel said.

"We were five deep at corner but I think I surprised them."

Trudel was beaten for a touchdown on the third play of the game against Linfield but things have improved every game and every year since.. In 1987 he was selected a Columbia Football Association second team all-star and last year, although teams stayed away from his side of the field, preferring instead to pick on the Clan's three rookie defensive backs, he received honorable mention all-star recognition.

Considering Trudel is the only four-year starter this decade in the Clan's secondary, besides Donohue Grant, now with Hamilton of the Canadian Football League, it might be expected he too would wind up in the CFL. He doesn't think so.

"Realistically, I don't think its all that likely," says Trudel, a combined kinesiology and chemistry major. "If I don't get drafted that's it; football is over and I'll hang 'em up. I'll be happy my abilities have taken me as far as they have."

Head Coach Chris Beaton

As Chris Beaton begins his seventh season as head coach of the Clan he is poised to become Simon Fraser's career leader in coaching victories.

In a head coaching tenure that began with his appointment in 1983, after stints as a player (1965-68), graduate assistant coach (1969), and assistant coach (1973-79), Beaton currently ranks second on the career win list with 30 victories, behind Simon Fraser Sports Hall of Fame coach and current Athletics Director Lorne Davies, with 34.

Beaton's life-time win/loss record with the Clan is 30-28 and his best season was in 1984 when he guided the Clan to a 7-3 record, the third best mark in Clan history.

As a player with the Clan Beaton has the distinction of having been selected the team's honorary captain in each of the program's first four years.

Beaton's Record

Terry Bailey
Offensive Coordinator

The duty of engineering the Clan's 1989 talent rich offense falls into the hands of second year offensive coordinator Terry Bailey. Described as having a great mind for the offensive game, Bailey calls all the offensive plays from the sidelines for the Clan.

In 1988, his first year as offensive coordinator, he is credited with having designed the offensive that enabled tailback Sean Millington to become the first rushing Clansman to break the 1000-yard barrier.

One of the great running backs to have worn a Clansmen uniform, Bailey's 1973 rushing total of 866 yards stood as the university single season record for 12 years until Orville Lee broke it in 1985.

For his exploits on the field with the Clan and a decade as a professional with the B.C. Lions, Bailey was inducted into the Simon Fraser Sports Hall of Fame in 1986 as a charter member.

Dave Trepanier
Assistant Defensive Coordinator

Dave Trepanier returns to the Clan coaching staff charged with the responsibility of assisting head coach Chris Beaton with the defence and working specifically with the linebackers.

An outstanding linebacker himself with the Clan from 1981-85, Trepanier previously coached with the Clan as an assistant in 1986 and 1987 and now he brings international coaching experience back to the Clan. Trepanier head-coached the Glasgow Lions of the Budweiser British Football League to the team's first ever playoff berth in 1988.

Jack Schriber
Offensive Line Coach

Known as a fiery competitor during his playing days as a running back with the UBC Thunderbirds, Jack Schriber brings that same enthusiasm to his job handling the offensive line.

A teacher at Charles Tupper Secondary, Schriber coaches players who are known for their high achievement and intensity.

Schriber began coaching with the Clan in 1975 and then returned in 1982 after a year's absence. He and his family live in Burnaby.

Don Shindle
Defensive Backs Coach

This is Don Shindle's first year as coach with the Clan and he will handle the defensive secondary. His previous coaching experience includes an assistant coaching position with Central Tech High School where his team won the Metro Toronto Bowl in 1988 and 1989.

Originally from Thunder Bay, Ont., Shindle now lives in Whistler where he works in the hotel management business.

Darryn Trainor
Quaterbacks and Receivers Coach

After closing out his Clan playing career last season, Darryn Trainor left for Scotland where he assumed the duties of co-head coach of the Glasgow Lions of the Budweiser British Football League.

Now back with the Clan as a graduate assistant in charge of quarterbacks and receivers, Trainor will teach Clan players some of the skills that earned him all-star honors as a player.

Trainor holds or shares four Clan records, including game, season and career touchdown passes.

Greg Kabatoff
Defensive Line Coach

Greg Kabatoff led the Clan in quarterback sacks the last two seasons and now as a graduate assistant coach his responsibility will be the defensive line.

Kabatoff, along with Darryn Trainor, was player-coach of the Glasgow Lions of the semi-pro American Football League in Britain and Scotland immediately following completion of his playing career with the Clan last year.
