JOE KAPP

GEORGE OLSON

As Cal's head football coach from 1982-86, Kapp instilled his fiery, never-say-die attitude in his teams.

open with a 92-yard touchdown run, third longest in Cal history. At the time, it was thought to be a broken play.

"Pete Elliot's philosophy was to never fumble when you had a lead," Hart recalled. "We were on our eight yard line and the play was supposed to be a dive handoff to me. That's what everyone expected, but Pete told Joe not to let anyone else know he was to keep the ball. That was part of the deception.

"I just plowed into the line, expecting to have the ball. About nine guys jumped on me. By the time I got up, Joe was at the 50. He broke a couple of tackles at the line, but then he was wide open. He probably was the slowest back on the team, but that's the way Joe was — always coming up with the big play.

"The magic of Joe was his running the Split-T Belly option to perfection," Hart said. "He did it as well as anyone, ever. He was utilized more as a single-wing tailback than as a quarterback. He could do everything. Nearly all the other schools had more talent, but they didn't have Joe. He'd snarl at defensive players and dare them to stop our option play."

Kapp fired a TD pass in a 20-17 victory over UCLA, scored the winning touchdown to edge Washington 12-7 and clinched the PCC title with a two-point conversion pass to Wayne Crow in a 16-15 squeaker over Stanford. Kapp finished his senior year with 56 completions in 97 attempts (57.7 percent) for 649 yards and was the rushing leader with 582 yards.

Cal was crushed 38-12 by Iowa in the Rose Bowl, capping a 7-4 season. The bigger and swifter Hawkeyes set records with 516 yards of total offense behind Bob Jeter and Willie Fleming, but the win-starved Bears' fans didn't mind. They finally had a winner again, and the man most responsible was Kapp, whose competitiveness at Pasadena was not ignored.

"Joe was crazy," recalled Fleming, who became Kapp's teammate with the British Columbia Lions. "I ran 77 yards for a TD in that Rose Bowl and placed us ahead something like 32-0. All of a sudden, I see this Cal guy running into the end zone, shaking his fist at me and hollering, 'We've got you guys right where we want you—we're going to kick your butt.' It was Joe."

Whereas Kapp was ultra-intense as a football player, he was a serious student of football who wasn't especially known as a hell-raiser. On the other hand, stories abound regarding Kapp's involvement with Newell's championship basketball team, on which he served as a sixth man and enforcer.

"Elliot was pretty straight-laced, and he kept a tight rein on the football players," Hart pointed out. "I don't recall any wild incidents with those football teams. His hell-raising days followed in Canada, and he got quite a reputation when a teammate cut him with a broken bottle, and again when he fought linebacker Lonnie Warwick in a Vikings' practice.

Two altercations, in particular, reveal how seriously Kapp took his role with the Cal basketball team as Newell was building a powerhouse culminating with the NCAA championship team of 1959. Kapp was concentrating on football by then, but he served on the 1957 and 1958 squads.

"I've never coached a bench player who was any better in terms of inciting his teammates to get into the game," Newell said. "Nobody was better at letting the guys know what was going on. If you were sitting next to him on the bench and not saying anything, he'd let you know about it."

Kapp's willingness to communicate wasn't restricted to his teammates. During the 1957 season, one of Cal's star players was Earl Robinson, who later was to play major league baseball. Robinson, now an instructor at Oakland's Laney College, is black. One of Cal's opponents in 1957 had no blacks, and Robinson was a target of their verbal and physical abuse on the Bears' court.

"It was a very tough and physical USC team," Robinson recalled. "They tried to outmuscle everybody, and we muscled them back. I was having a good game, and they were making derogatory remarks, trying to throw me off my game. There weren't any tacit racial overtones, but some people interpreted it that way.

"Joe was watching from the bench when this 6-10 guy flagrantly elbowed me in the back as I was walking to the free throw line. I reacted by jawing with the guy, and I remember hearing Florence Newell (Pete's wife) yelling from the stands: 'Hit him, Earl! Hit him!' When the first half ended, Joe followed the USC players into their dressing room and chewed them out."

> "I've never coached a bench player who was any better in terms of inciting his teammates to get into the game."
> —Pete Newell

That was a relatively tame incident, however, compared to what transpired when Cal was visiting New York City for the annual Holiday Festival. It was Christmas Eve and the Bears were practicing at the 27th Armory on Lexington Ave., the players were weary following a long cross-country flight, and it was pouring rain.

"After practice, I told the guys I'd go outside and hail some cabs," Newell recalled. "I yelled for this taxi, and it stops about 300 feet away. I told the players not to run because it was slippery. Well, these two drunks waddled out of a bar and saw the cab's doors wide open, so they climbed in one side while one of our players enters the other side.

"Joe sees this and becomes incensed. He's yelling, 'It's our cab!' and the drunks don't budge, so he pulls them out of the cab. I remember telling him to go easy. As it turns out, the rest of the guys celebrating in the bar realize what's going on, so they pour out to help their buddies. The bar empties, and the next thing you know we're in a full-scale street fight.

"We finally got a couple of skirmishes settled," Newell added, "and I look toward the intersection and see Joe and two or three guys from the bar illuminated by the streetlamp. It was like a scene from a James Cagney movie. Joe kept dodging and faking, and they didn't come within five feet of him."

Kapp was no slouch once he got into games, either. Newell remembers him beating Stanford with a last-second shot. Kapp was no longer was with the Bears when they became NCAA champs, but Newell didn't forget. When the champions were honored at a campus rally, the coach introduced him as a member of the team.

Joe Kapp indeed was special.

HITTING THE LITTLE TIME

Small-college football may not be as glamorous as I-A, but everyone agrees that it's fun and just as rewarding.

In choosing the smaller, quieter North Dakota State campus, Dan Reszka found out that the gridiron action was just as loud as Division I.

BY MICHAEL BRADLEY

Dan Reszka's childhood football dreams were always a little crowded. Surrounding his electrifying touchdowns and game-saving interceptions were 75,000 or so spectators, providing a loud soundtrack to his hopes. When you grow up in suburban Milwaukee, that's the way it is. Your fantasies have a Big 10 flavor.

When Northern Illinois offered him a scholarship and a chance to play against Wisconsin, Michigan State and even Nebraska, with their loud crowds, television cameras and football traditions, Reszka grabbed it. Sometimes dreams do come true.

And sometimes they don't. After redshirting a year, Reszka saw limited action on special teams for the Huskies as a freshman. But the future didn't look promising. Ahead of him on the defensive backfield depth chart were other freshmen and a sophomore or two. It appeared much of Reszka's next three years would be spent as part of the soundtrack, not the action.

So he transferred from the big-time down to Division II and North Dakota State—one of the schools that originally recruited him. They play before about 12,000 each Saturday in Fargo, and the TV crews—save the local affiliates—don't pay much attention. Reszka had to readjust his dreams.

"When you grow up where I did, you get excited by the hype of Big 10 football," Reszka said. "When we played Wisconsin and Nebraska in front of 75,000 fans, it was exciting.

"But in North Dakota, they don't have any pro teams, so they treat us like pro athletes. Sometimes when I go to a supermarket, people ask for my autograph. That's kind of nice."

Playing on the Bison's 1990 national championship team wasn't too bad, either. Reszka has two more years of football ahead of him, and he doesn't mind spending them far from the glamour and hype of the big-time college game. Like many small-college athletes who play Off-

COLLEGE FOOTBALL Legends

JOE KAPP

On the gridiron and the hardwood, Cal's Kapp was one tough Golden Bear.

BY NICK PETERS

Warren Moon is still trying, but Joe Kapp holds the distinction of being the only quarterback in history to lead teams to the Rose Bowl, the Grey Cup and the Super Bowl.

That's regarded as somewhat of a quirk because Kapp doesn't rate among the greatest quarterbacks of all time. Instead, he's revered as a colorful and controversial leader of men who frequently performed the unexpected.

How else can you explain the fiercely determined Kapp being branded as a winner at the University of California despite an 11-20 three-year record and the dubious distinction of throwing 29 interceptions compared to merely eight touchdown passes?

Nick Peters covers baseball and college sports for the Sacramento Bee after specializing on Cal football and basketball during his days as sports editor of the defunct Berkeley Daily Gazette and later with the Oakland Tribune. He has authored "100 years of Cal Football" and "Giants Almanac."

> "Nearly all the other schools had more talent, but they didn't have Joe."
> —Jack Hart

How else could Kapp, as a senior in 1958, overcome an 0-2 start to lead the Golden Bears to the Pacific Coast Conference Championship and a Rose Bowl berth? That was 33 years ago, and Cal still hasn't been back to Pasadena on New Year's Day.

How else could he possibly defeat the champion Green Bay Packers twice as a Minnesota Vikings rookie in 1967? Or, how could Kapp, a man known for throwing wobbly passes, fire a record-tying seven TD passes against the Baltimore Colts in 1969, the season in which he remarkably became the MVP of the NFL?

Joe Kapp was unique. He was an athlete of substance more than style, leaving an indelible imprint on teammates and opponents. He even managed to leave his mark on a short-lived coaching career, being on the sidelines as a rookie in 1982 when his Golden Bears etched themselves into college football lore with The Play, a multi-lateral phenomenon that stunned Stanford and its marching band in a bizarre Big Game.

Those who know Joe Kapp couldn't have been surprised. Because he was the ultimate underdog as an athlete, his legendary career was brimming with upsets. That trend started not long after he was recruited out of Hart High in Southern California on a basketball scholarship by Hall of Fame coach Pete Newell.

"There were no football scholarships available," Newell recalled. "I wanted him because he was a skilled basketball player. Red Sanders wanted him for the UCLA football team, but told Joe he couldn't play basketball. He came to Cal because he was told he could play both sports."

Jack Hart, now a Bay Area advertising executive following a coaching career that included stops at Cal and Illinois, enrolled at Berkeley the same time as Kapp. They soon became fast friends because they had similar personalities and a tremendous desire to succeed.

"With Joe, it was every day, every way," Hart said. "In all the years I've been in athletics as a player, coach and fan, the two greatest competitors I've been around are Joe Kapp and Dick Butkus. Joe didn't know what fear was. He's one of the most competitive and driven people I've ever seen.

"He wasn't a highly-regarded high school quarterback, but he was determined to succeed. He didn't throw picture passes, but he did what had to be done to win. We were co-captains of the freshman team (1955), fourth-string at the start of our sophomore year, starters by the fourth game and co-captains again as seniors on the Rose Bowl team."

Kapp's penchant for rising to the occasion was evident from those humble beginnings. After beating out three quarterbacks as a sophomore, Kapp climaxed the season with an emotional performance in the Big Game against Stanford. It was Pappy Waldorf's final game as Cal's coach, and Kapp did his best to send him out a winner.

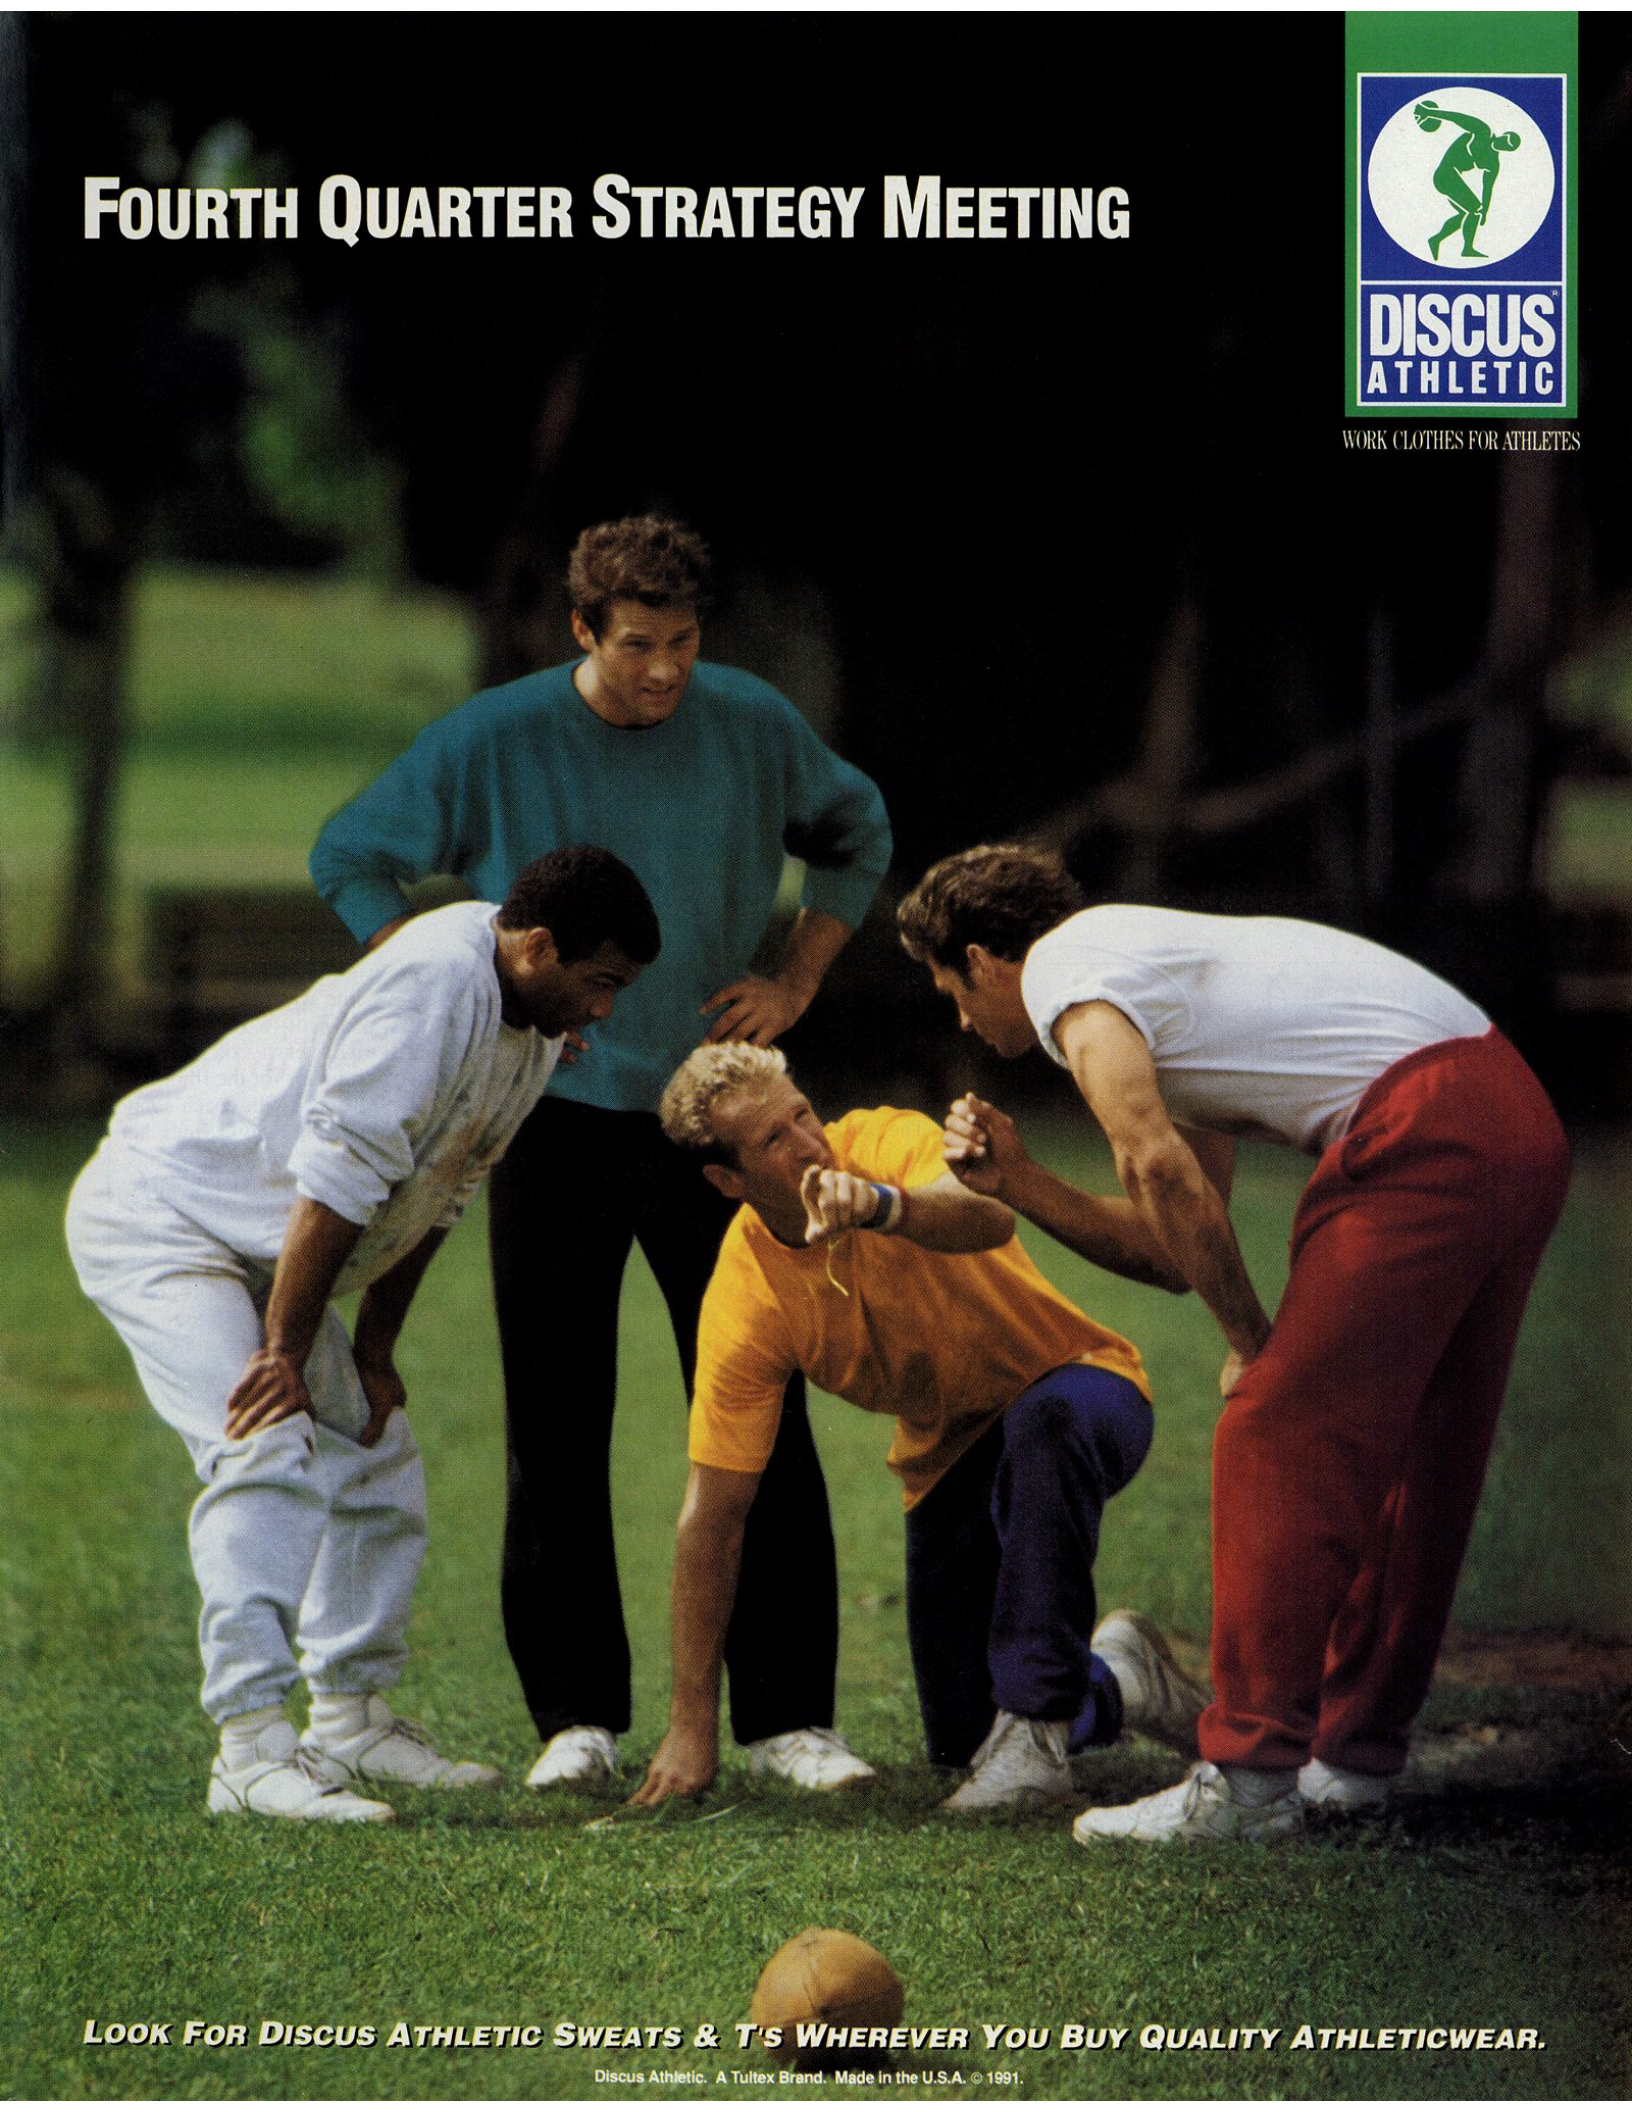

Stanford was a heavy favorite behind All-American senior quarterback John Brodie. But Kapp rushed for 106 yards and the Bears posted a 20-18 upset. Pete Elliot took over as coach in 1957, and Cal's only victory was a 12-0 drubbing of Southern Cal, the school's first victory over the Trojans in seven years.

Coming off a 1-9 season, the Bears weren't expected to be contenders in 1958. In fact, they were picked near the bottom of the PCC, and it seemed an accurate evaluation when College of the Pacific jolted Cal in the season opener, 24-20. Kapp scored a pair of touchdowns, including a 50-yard run, and had a great day, but was overshadowed by COP standout Dick Bass, who rushed for 215 yards.

The Bears were crushed 32-12 at Michigan State the next week, so Hart and Kapp huddled on the plane ride home and decided it was time for Cal to stop being a loser. The team rallied for seven victories in eight games and went to the Rose Bowl.

Kapp's interception of a conversion pass prevented a tie and saved a 14-12 victory over USC, the last time the Bears would defeat the Trojans until 1970. The team improved to 4-2 with a 23-6 rout of Oregon, in which Kapp broke the game

THE LITTLE TIME

"There's a great campus atmosphere. It's Saturday afternoon America."

—Walter Juliff

Broadway, he'll enjoy the chance to compete, trading national attention for a little more of the collegiate experience.

"I'm not unhappy with my decision," he said. "I'm glad I played Division I, and now I'm glad to be in Division II. I got a taste of both."

Small-college football is filled with stories like Reszka's. Some players have been recruited by I-A schools and elected to go where they knew they'd play three or four years. Others transfer down from large programs, seeking a starting job or just a different attitude toward the game. The bulk haven't turned down big-time offers or harbor professional dreams. They just want to play football.

"I get to see a few Division II or III games each year, and that's where the football is played for fun," said Walter Juliff, a scout for the Dallas Cowboys. "There's a great campus atmosphere. It's Saturday afternoon America."

Of course, there is a drastic talent drop-off away from Division I-A. The smaller the school, the smaller and slower the players. There are exceptions, of course, but they do not predominate.

"I can really tell the difference between I-A and II at the skill positions," Reszka said. "Everybody on the Division II level is a great athlete, but the big-time players are a step or two ahead, and the linemen are bigger. The skill levels are the same, it's just a matter of size and speed."

Though big-time fans and players may not believe it, NCAA Division I-AA, II and III and NAIA Divisions I and II do not toil in a vacuum. Pro aspirations are realized by small-college players, though no one would ever claim NDSU's North Central Conference to be a farm system for the pros. Still, 246 (19.5 percent) players on the 1990 professional rosters played at small colleges, as did the 75 more selected in last April's draft.

And we're not just talking courtesy calls, here. Just ask All-Pros like Jerry Rice of the 49ers (Mississippi Valley State), Andre Reed of the Bills (Kutztown University) and the Bears' Richard Dent (Tennessee State). Or all-time greats like Walter Payton (Jackson St.), Bob Hayes (Florida A&M) and Joe Greene (North Texas St.). Small-college football is not played in slow motion by big-time rejects.

"About one-third of the guys drafted played I-AA or below," said Tom Gamble, assistant director of player personnel for the Philadelphia Eagles. "When you're talking about I-AA, you're talking about some schools, like Jackson State or Arkansas State, that are equal to some I-A teams. That's some pretty good small-college football."

Anybody who played Dayton last season knows just how good. Anchoring the Flyers' offensive line was hulking guard Dave Postmus, a 6-foot, 3-inch senior transfer from the University of Illinois. Postmus started as a junior for the Illini but had a "little controversy" with coach John Mackovic and bolted the team. Since he had redshirted his freshman year, Postmus could not go to another I-A school, because the mandatory year he would have sat out would have completed his eligibility.

After a brief search, he wound up at Dayton, determined to continue progress toward a professional career. Though he disliked the football team's second-class status on campus—"It's really a basketball school," he said—Postmus worked hard and earned an invitation to the NFL's scouting combine in Indianapolis in March. Once there, he shined. Postmus bench-pressed 225 pounds 36 times, tops among all prospects, and registered a 33-inch vertical leap, the best of all the linemen.

"I knew what I had to do, and I kept it in perspective," Postmus said. "The pro scouts know if you're out there. If you're good, they'll find you." (Unfortunately none of the 28 NFL teams found Postmus in the 1991 draft, but you best believe someone will take advantage of his free agent status.)

Gamble concurs. "There really aren't any secrets," he said. "The combines, scouts and coaches do a good job. It's tough not to know about a guy who can play."

After spending four years as part of a major-college program, Postmus' journey to Division III had to include a few shocks. He noticed a little more attention from ref-al manager—and the guiding light—of the world champion New York Giants. Young, who also made several major All-East teams that year, including the Associated Press squad, was the Giants' GM for their first Super Bowl victory, and also is considered one of the masterminds of the earlier Miami Dolphins' championship teams.

Young, however, wasn't the only noted performer on the '51 squad. The two 1,000-yard rushers, Myers and Burt Talmage, were also well-known and well-recognized for their accomplishments that season. Myers, who ran for 1,069 yards, gained AP All-East second team honors, was named to United Press International's first-team All-East, and earned honorable mention on Colliers magazine's All-East squad. Myers went on to play for the Los Angeles Rams and the Philadelphia Eagles.

Talmage gained first-team AP All-East accolades, based on the strength of his 1,025-yard rushing season. Both he and Myers scored 14 touchdowns each.

Though Bucknell was classified as a "little" college, the team did post victories over some well-known football schools during that storied year. There were the usual routs against lesser football powers (62-32 vs. Buffalo, 41-7 vs. Gettysburg, 54-10 vs. Muhlenberg), but the team also scored impressive wins over Temple, Colgate, Kent State, Lafayette and Lehigh.

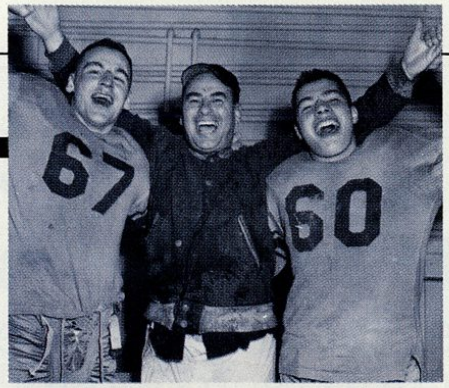

Against Lafayette, in fact, the Herd rumbled for a total of 562 yards en route to a 40-21 victory at the Leopards' home field. Myers gained 133 yards and Talmage 123 as the Bison scored three quick TDs to set the stage for the romp.

The Bison defense was typically lost in the wake of the team's offensive prowess, but it shined against Temple, when it limited the Owls to just 34 yards on the ground, 104 in the air, and allowed Temple to cross the midfield stripe only twice in the 28-7 win.

In the game against Lehigh, Bucknell carried only a 14-7 lead into the third quarter, but again, the defense came through, this time with two quick interceptions, which set up two quick scores and pushed the Herd out to a 28-7 lead entering the fourth quarter.

The defense's proudest moment, however, came during the team's Oct. 13 showdown with unbeaten Kent State in Ohio. With Bucknell holding a slim 13-7 lead, Kent State penetrated to the Herd's 14-yard line in the game's waning moments. But the defense, led by Young, repulsed the Kent State attack to preserve the victory. The game also showcased the effectiveness of Bucknell's passing attack: quarterback Dean hit his favorite target, end Joe Gallagher, five times, including a 16-yard scoring toss in the third period that proved to be the winning margin.

The only other tight game the Herd played during '51 was against Colgate, at Hamilton, N.Y. This time, it was Bucknell's passing attack and special teams that paced the 21-20 victory over the Red Raiders. Colgate actually outgained Bucknell, 386-361, but was unable to ever wrest the lead during the game. Dean completed 12 of 16 passes for 211 yards, snuck for one score and threw to fullback Albert for another. Also instrumental in the win was Joe Mason, who kicked three extra points, and Myers, who scored the game-winning touchdown on a 58-yard run in the fourth quarter.

The Herd closed out its perfect season with a 33-6 win over Delaware at home. Bucknell gained 401 yards against the Blue Hens, and had a 27-0 lead going into the fourth quarter. Talmage scored twice in the opening quarter to put the game out of reach, as the Bisons inked the last chapter in their storybook 9-0 season—the team's first undefeated season since 1918, and its last since then.

The season wasn't over for Albert and Young, however. Both seniors played in the annual Blue-Gray game in Birmingham, Ala., to close out their college careers.

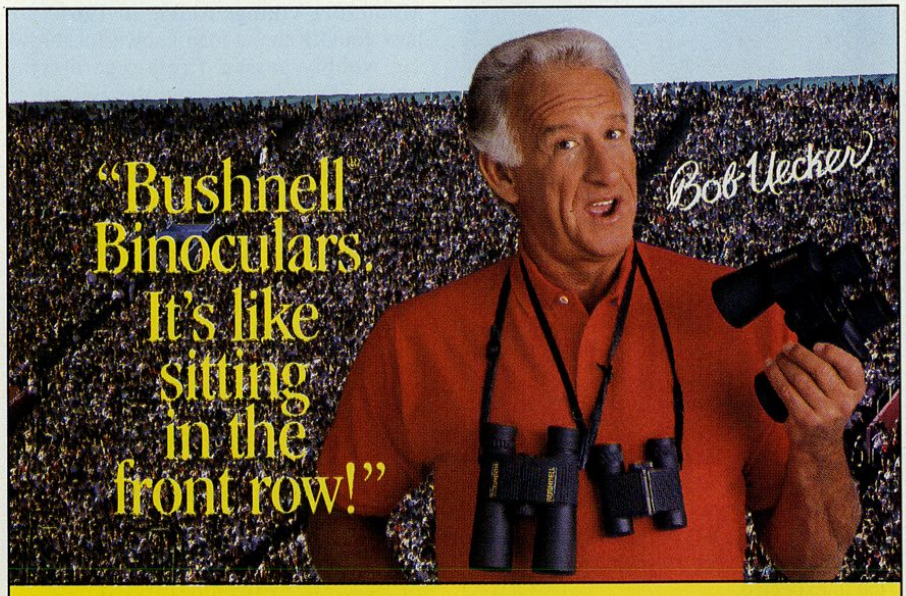

Forty years after that team etched the most remarkable season in Bucknell's football history, it still holds a number of marks that may never be broken.

Among them: most points in a season (339); most touchdowns in a season (50); and most yards in a game (698 vs. Buffalo). Myers still ranks as Bucknell's all-time leading rusher, with 2,622 yards, and his 'Touchdown Twin,' Talmage, is fifth with 1,878 yards.

The '51 Herd team had 38 players on its squad; eight players, including Young, Myers and Talmage, are enshrined in the Bucknell Athletic Hall of Fame, along with Lawrence, the team's head coach, and the team trainer.

This year, the surviving members of the '51 squad will gather at Bucknell to reminisce on the occasion of the 40th anniversary of their remarkable season.

And for however brief a moment, that mighty Herd squad will rumble again.

Much of what's learned in college can be used throughout a student's lifetime. Learning to be a responsible adult is one of the most important of those lessons.

Anheuser-Busch is committed to developing and supporting grass roots programs that are designed to encourage responsible decision-making on college campuses by students of legal drinking age.

"The Buddy System" is one example. It's an awareness program that encourages you to help friends and strangers avoid drunk driving and other abusive drinking situations. If you can keep someone from drinking too much, or keep someone who's had too much to drink from driving, you'll be the best buddy anybody can have.

Anheuser-Busch is also a sponsor of the BACCHUS program, set up on over 430 campuses nationwide. BACCHUS gives you the chance to make personal and informed decisions about alcohol, as well as the opportunity to play a major role in encouraging other students to think about, talk about and develop responsible behavior.

As always, Anheuser-Busch and BACCHUS promote as part of the decisions a respect for state laws and campus policies regarding alcohol consumption.

In BACCHUS, there are plenty of peers, but no pressure. Just plain talk in a relaxed environment. If there isn't a chapter on your campus, consider starting one. If there is, get involved. Because students like you can make the best teachers.

Obviously, there's no substitute for the safe and responsible drinking practices promoted by these programs. And they're practices that may someday make our Alert Cab program unnecessary. But, for the time being, and for those faced with a possible drunk driving situation, Alert Cab provides taxicab rides home from participating bars and restaurants.

If you need a ride, just let your bartender or server know. You'll be picked up by a cab. And participating Alert Cab bars, restaurants and cab companies may even pick up some or all of the fare.

Perhaps the most important way we help meet the demand for information about responsible use of our products is through our sponsorship of National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week (NCAAW), coming to your school each October.

Featuring all kinds of enjoyable activities and educational presentations, NCAAW is about the health, safety and social issues you face when making decisions about drinking. It's about obeying state laws and campus policies and avoiding abusive drinking situations. And it's about adding to your margin of safety, and that of everyone else, by making responsible decisions.

It's also about concentrating on your reading, writing and responsibility. And coming away with something you can use in the real world.

These efforts represent the kind of grass roots programs that Anheuser-Busch has developed, or is supporting, to encourage responsible drinking by adult collegians. For more information, contact BACCHUS of the U.S., Inc., P.O. Box 100430, Denver, Colorado 80210; NCAAW, Fort Hays State University, 600 Park Street, Hays, Kansas 67601-4099; or your local Anheuser-Busch wholesaler.

MINOLTA JUST TAUGHT CAMERAS A WHOLE NEW WAY TO THINK.

Introducing the Maxxum® 7xi.

If only lighting never changed, your subjects never moved, and backgrounds were always constant, picture-taking would be a snap.

But they do. And that's the challenge and the fun of photography. It's also why you need the first camera that thinks for itself.

Suppose you're watching cyclists race from light through shadow and back. The Maxxum 7xi will break from the pack with its ability to adjust for the most minute lighting changes.

If the cyclists speed up, slow down or take off in any direction, Maxxum's unique Predictive Autofocus will freeze them in perfect clarity. Only the 7xi can do it four times a second.

And because things happen fast, the 7xi has all systems working before your eye meets the viewfinder.

Because Maxxum analyzes images a whole new way, photos are sharper and more precise than ever.

You see, the new Maxxum 7xi can make your life easy because it thinks with the most powerful computer ever put behind a lens. It's the first computer which applies "fuzzy logic" to draw on the pre-programmed expertise of professional photographers.

So you'll be guided to the perfect, subtle decision even in the most complicated situation.

What more can an SLR do? Well, in this case, its 4-mode flash reduces red-eye, its compact lenses zoom automatically and its Creative Expansion Cards let you really exercise your ingenuity.

Yes, the Maxxum 7xi has a new way of thinking. But it's the results that will amaze you when you take it for a ride.

THE LITTLE TIME

erees and a little less emphasis on practice and film time. Though he played against smaller players, he believes the experience helped him.

"I had to stay lower against the little guys, and when I played against bigger guys, I was so used to staying low, I had an advantage," he explained. "The smaller players are quicker, so that helped me with my hand placements and my footspeed."

Despite his success, Postmus is a bit of a rarity among small-college players. The majority that make it to the pros play the skill positions, like running back, wide receiver or defensive back. Beefy high schoolers get major-college attention, leaving the smaller prospects for the rest. In order to get professional attention, a small-college lineman must dominate nearly every play and then wow the scouts at a combine. That should earn a low-round draft selection or free-agent signing. "It's a two, three or four-step process," Juliff said.

For backs and receivers, there's only one main criterion—speed. Run a consistent 4.3-second 40-yard dash, and you'll find work. Of course, the professional development process may take a little longer, due to level of competition, but the message is clear: the pros want speed.

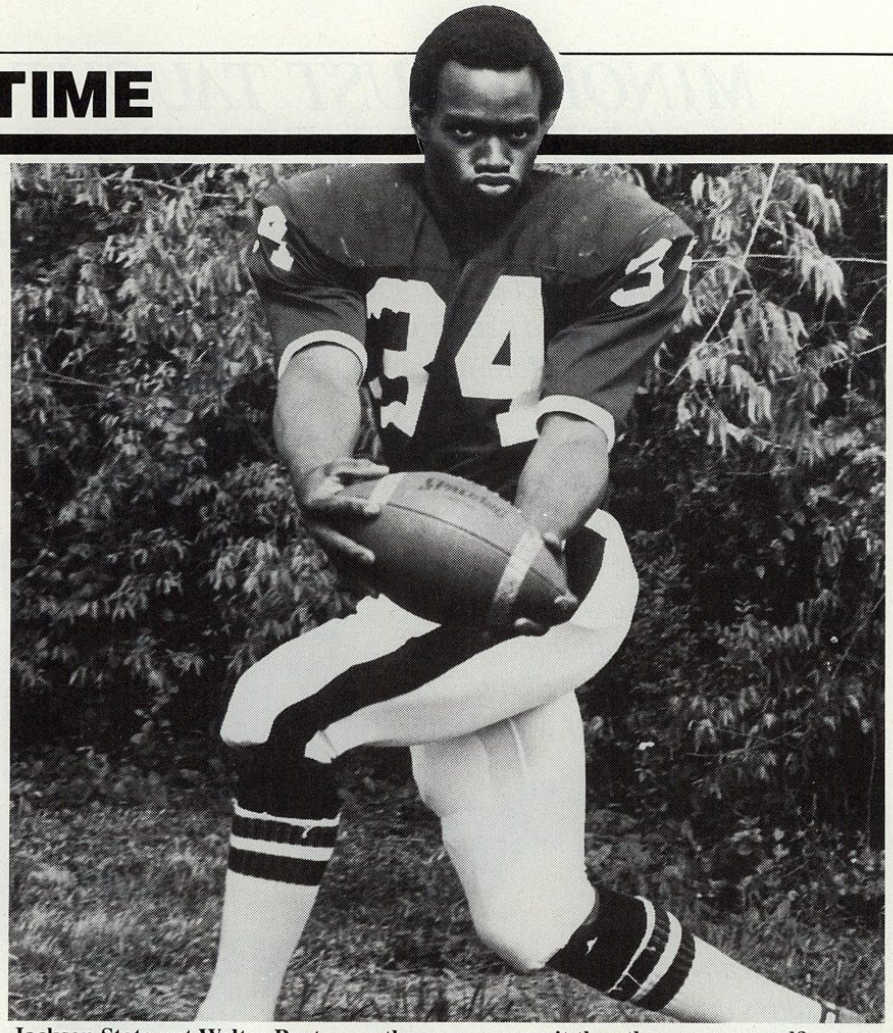

"Jeff Query of Millikin University was drafted in 1990 by the Packers in the fifth round, and you could wake him up in the middle of the night, and he'd run a 4.3," said Dan Shonka of the National Football Scouting Organization in Tulsa, one of the NFL's main talent evaluators. "When the smoke clears, the fast guys are left."

Despite the occasional Postmus or Query, small-college rosters are short on behemoths and burners but long on desire. Some players receive some I-A interest as high school seniors but don't get the same "can't miss" billing as some blue-chip recruits. They choose the smaller school route to get more playing time and escape some of the demands of life at a factory.

Redshirt freshman linebacker Chad Pundsack chose North Dakota State over Wyoming, Western Michigan and Northern Illinois because of its proximity to his home in Albany, MN. His brother, Dick, is a defensive lineman for the Bison and his sister, Cheri, plays volleyball there. Chad will see some playing time this year and anticipates starting during his final three seasons.

"I don't want to go somewhere and just watch others play," Pundsack says. "I talked to a couple of guys on our team who've transferred from big schools, and they said the big-time isn't worth it. You don't have much time to yourself, and football isn't fun."

Small-college football isn't a parade of laughs. Practices are tough, players have plenty of responsibilities, and no matter what the level, the fans want to see winners. "Our coaches have a lot of pressure on them," NDSU's Reszka said. "The fans expect us to win all the time."

Jackson State put Walter Payton on the map, or was it the other way around?

The winning isn't done on such a grand scale. Ascend to the Division II or III title game, and you'll get on television. That's about the extent of it. As a result, there isn't as much money available. That means smaller weight rooms, less-extravagant travel and few of the amenities found in I-A.

"I have a lot of friends who play at the University of Miami," said Tim Lester, an Eastern Kentucky senior running back who grew up in Miami. "The main difference between Eastern and there is money. We win just as much as they do."

Lester, who overcame knee surgery as a sophomore to rush for more than 1,100 yards last season, is a big part of that success. The 5-10, 210-pounder has already attracted the interest of pro scouts, thanks to Eastern Kentucky's winning tradition (five EKU players were on the 1990 pro roster), and looks forward to earning a spot in next year's NFL draft.

"We're going to play Louisville this year, and I want to show everyone I could have played Division I-A football," Lester said. "But I'm enjoying myself here. I wouldn't change for anything."

And that seems to be the overriding theme among small college players. Sure, many of them yearn for a shot at the big time, and some hope to continue on to play professionally. But football isn't a job to the majority; it's part of the collegiate experience.

> "The coaches here are more open... you can go into their offices and just shoot the breeze, talk about football or life."
> —Dan Reszka

"One of the things I like most about playing here is my relationship with the coaches," Reszka said. "At Northern Illinois, we knew the coaches on a professional basis. We'd see them at practice or at meetings, and that was it. The coaches here are more open. Sure, they want to win, but you can go into their offices and just shoot the breeze, talk about football or life."

Away from the screaming crowds.

A SELDOM DISCOURAGED HERD

The 1951 Bucknell Bisons thundered to a record-setting perfect season.

Bucknell's Brad Myers fights for yardage during the Bison's 21-20 victory over Colgate.

BY JOHN BARTIMOLE

At a time when it was rare to have one runner gain 1,000 yards in a nine-game season, this team had two.

In the days when it was unusual to use the pass as anything but a last-gasp tool, this team threw for 1,261 meaningful yards en route to a perfect 9-0 season.

When it was difficult to run up huge scores because of the emphasis on the ground game, this team managed to outscore its rivals, 339-126.

This team is still the one they talk about at Bucknell University—this great 1951 team that went 9-0, graduated many players onto stellar professional and athletic careers, and placed 10 of its members in the university's Athletic Hall of Fame.

"When Bucknell football fans talk about great teams, this '51 team is at the top of their list," Brad Tufts, associate athletic director at Bucknell, said. "Even though we've had teams win the Lambert Cup (1960 and 1964), that '51 team is the measuring stick for all the others. It was an exceptional team that really clicked."

The '51 Bison didn't win the Lambert Trophy—symbolic of supremacy in eastern football—simply because the award hadn't yet been initiated. Still, the team holds the distinction of being Bucknell's last undefeated football squad, and the team to record the most victories in a single season.

Even more impressive, in addition to the nine games Bucknell won in '51, the team had won its last four (after a rough 2-3 start) in 1950, and followed the '51 session by winning its first four, stringing together a 17-game undefeated streak.

"This was in the days of two-platoon football," Tufts said. "It was also in the days when teams ran the ball almost exclusively. Yet, the '51 team threw the ball well when it had to."

The '51 Bison averaged a phenomenal 463.3 yards per game—almost all on the ground—smashing the eastern record for yardage previously held by the great '45 Blanchard-Davis team at Army.

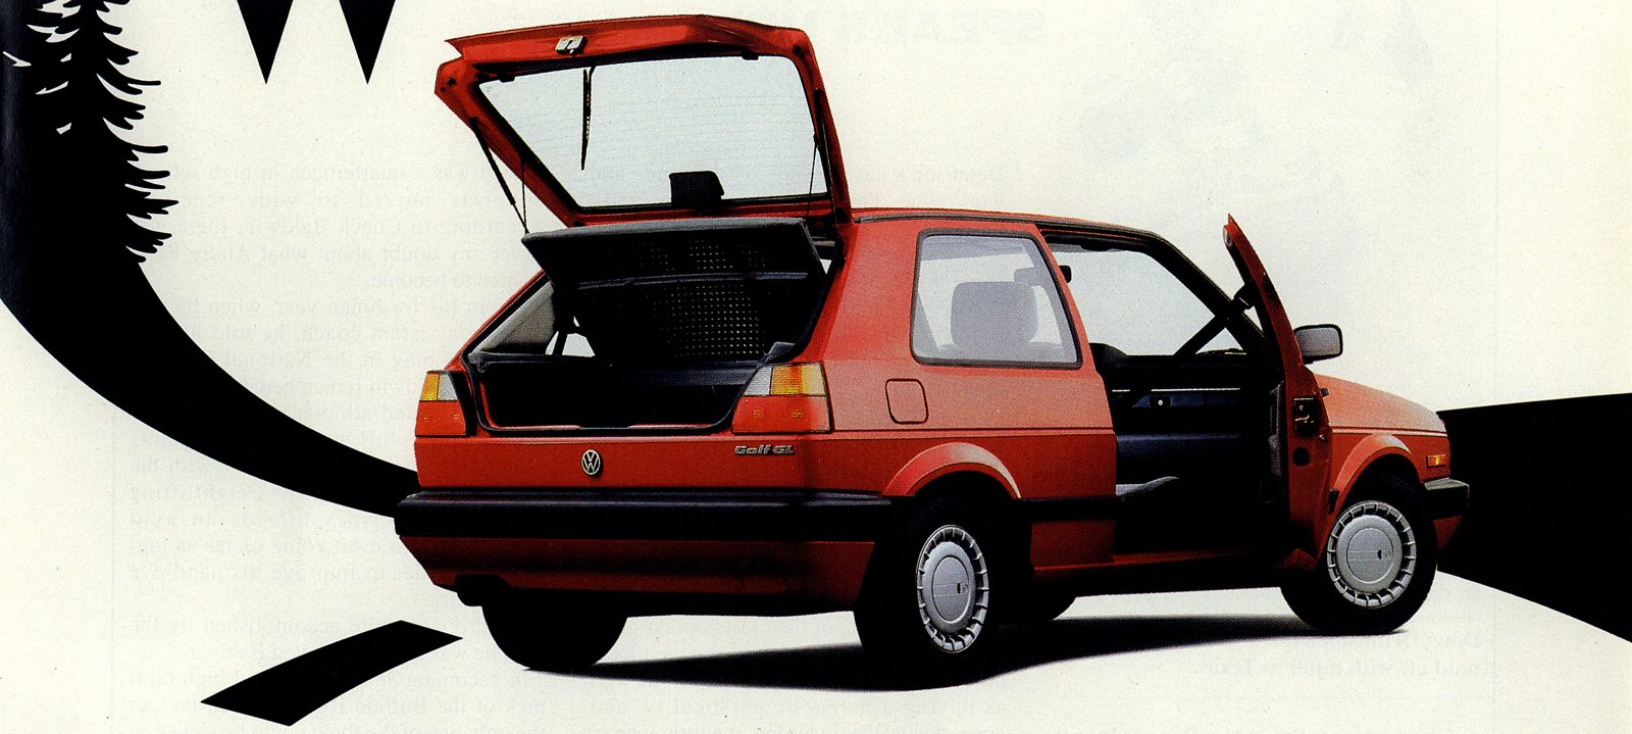

Because of the ferociousness of the ground attack, which gained an average of 323.2 yards per game, the Bison, coached by Henry Lawrence, were able to pass the ball with extreme effectiveness when necessary. In fact, the team averaged more than 26 yards per completion, a statistic that would make any of today's supercharged offenses ecstatic.

An interesting note about the Herd's passing game was its diversity: quarterback Tommy Dean did most of the throwing, completing 28 of 66 passes for four TDs and 549 yards. But a trio of running backs—Glenn Aspinwall, Bob Albert and Brad Myers—also threw the ball, picking up almost 700 aerial yards between them.

The '51 squad remains special to Bucknell fans and to eastern football, representing the heart of that 17-game winning streak and boasting some of the most well-known of Bucknell's players. For example, the starting defensive tackle on that memorable team was George Young, a first team Little All-America selection who signed with the Dallas Texans of the AFL, but who is best known for being the gener-

THE LITTLE TIME

PENNSYLVANIA'S LITTLE GUY SPEAKS UP!

Doug Dennison's hard work at Kutztown paid off with a job in Texas.

Okay, name the only Pennsylvania Conference school to have three players make the NFL.

Need some help? How about this: they have had at least one player in the pros since 1974, and one of them even played in last year's Super Bowl.

Give up?

The answer: Kutztown University.

Okay, so Notre Dame they're not, but for a small school, playing in the shadows of Penn State and Pittsburgh, Kutztown University certainly can hold its head up high as far as its list of alumni that have been or still are in the National Football League is concerned.

Their three alumni to have made the pros are running backs Doug Dennison (Dallas Cowboys) and Bruce Harper (New York Jets), and wide receiver Andre Reed (Buffalo Bills).

But why Kutztown? What is the secret? Is it something in the water? Perhaps it's something in the coaching. George Baldwin, now coaching semi-pro ball in England, was the head coach at Kutztown from 1973 to 1987. He coached all three players. Well, coach?

"When you come from a small school, you've got to have that something extra," Baldwin suggested.

Doug Dennison was in his senior year when Baldwin started at K.U., but it was obvious that that 'something' was there. In Dennison's case it was the diligence and work ethic. That ethic was typified early that year.

"It was the fifth game of the season and Doug broke off a nice run of about 6 or 8 yards, but then he busted his knee up," Baldwin remembered. "Everyone thought it was over, but Doug was determined to make it back." He did, and in fact was signed by the Dallas Cowboys as a free agent the following season. He played with the Cowboys from 1974 until 1979.

Bruce Harper not only had to overcome the plight of the small college, but also the plight of just plain being small.

"He was a great talent," recalled Baldwin, "but he was only 5-foot-7."

Harper was one of the most popular players on the Kutztown campus, being a local boy, from Englewood, New Jersey, as well as having a magnetic personality, and appearing as the underdog, the little man in the land of the giants. Another reason he was so popular was his effectiveness, which often goes unnoticed in a small-sized small-college player (see Meggett, David; Towson State).

Bruce was a part of at least seven school records between 1974 and '76, including rushing yards in a season (1,132), rushing yards in a career (2,169), TDs in a season (14), and TDs in a career (23).

"We always suspected that no one would give him a chance," said Baldwin, "but knew he would make it if given a chance."

Well, Harper did indeed make it, signing with the New York Jets in 1977 as a free agent.

He became their kickoff and punt return specialist, even setting an NFL record for combined punt and kickoff return yardage in 1978 (1,658 yards). Harper also became only the fifth player in NFL history to total 2,000 yards of total offense in a season twice in his career. He also became a dangerous third-down threat coming out of the backfield. However, injuries eventually slowed Harper, and in 1984 a knee injury finally ended his career. Harper is now retired and living in New Jersey, and is taking it easy, after suffering a massive heart attack in late March.

Perhaps the best of the three pros that Coach Baldwin had during his tenure at Kutztown was Andre Reed.

Reed was a quarterback in high school, but was moved to wide receiver. According to Coach Baldwin, there was never any doubt about what Andre Reed wanted to become.

"From his freshman year, when he met with an assistant coach, he told him he wanted to play in the National Football League." Baldwin remembered that Andre was a dedicated athlete, who did everything from uphill and downhill sprints (Andre also worked excessively with the track and field coach), to weightlifting (Baldwin describes him as an avid weightlifter), to even going as far as juggling, in order to improve his hand-eye coordination.

"Andre was quite accomplished by the time he was a senior," stated Baldwin.

In becoming an accomplished high draft pick of the Buffalo Bills—in fact, he was the only one of the three not to be signed as a free agent—Reed set as many as nine school records. He still holds the school records for yards in a game (154), yards in a career (2002), TD catches in a season (seven), and TD catches in a career (14).

Reed has reached his goal of playing in the National Football League, and in fact is the star wide receiver of the AFC champion Buffalo Bills, and quarterback Jim Kelly's favorite target.

But back to the original question: Why Kutztown University? Is it in the coaching?

Baldwin nixes that idea. "Coaching has had very little to do with it," he modestly said. "But what we did give the kids was an opportunity.

"There was nothing unusual about Kutztown University. There were good kids with good character and a strong work ethic. If you're good, small school or not, the scouts will find you."

Maybe there was something they didn't do?

"Well," Baldwin firmly states, "We didn't pamper our athletes. We were a small school, and the players were no more special than anyone else."

So there you have it, Kutztown University, a small school with a big (and getting bigger) NFL tradition.

1991 AT&T LONG DISTANCE AWARD

AT&T brings you another great long distance connection.

Webster doesn't have enough adjectives to appropriately describe Doug Flutie's long distance connection with Gerard Phelan on Nov. 24, 1984.

To those rooting for Boston College that day, the improbable final play fell into the "last-gasp", "Hail Mary", "desperation-heave" category.

Fans of victim Miami, though, might have described the ending as "heartbreaking", "gut-wrenching", or "lucky".

The record books forever will show the score, Boston College 47, Miami 45, and list a lot of impressive offensive stats. It will be left to videotape, though, to capture the fantastic finish.

The high-scoring affair appeared to have been decided when Hurricane running back Melvin Bratton scored his fourth touchdown, a 1-yard plunge, to give 12th-ranked Miami a 45-41 advantage with 28 seconds remaining.

Greg Cox kicked off into the end zone, forcing the 10th-rated Eagles and their magical Flutie to start from their own 20.

"We've got at least four plays," Flutie told his troops. "Let's get the ball out near midfield and put one up in the end zone."

Flutie, destined to win the '84 Heisman Trophy, began the drive with a 19-yard completion to Troy Stradford. Then hit Scott Gieselman with a 13-yard pass, putting the Eagles on Miami's 48.

Although obviously nervous, the Hurricane fans who filled the Orange Bowl relaxed a bit knowing that a field goal would do no good. The Eagles needed a TD, and likely two completions to get one.

Flutie's incompletion with six seconds left seemed to seal a Miami victory.

With the game's outcome on his shoulders, the 5-9 Flutie then produced his most memorable moment. He took the snap, drifted back between his own 35- and 40-yard lines, and unleashed a bomb toward the end zone.

"The play was called a flood tip," then Boston College coach Jack Bicknell said. "It's designed to come down to Phelan, who tips the ball to someone else. But if it hits you in the chest, you catch it."

That's exactly what happened, as Phelan, Flutie's best friend and roommate, corralled the ball despite being surrounded by six defenders.

"Doug threw a rocket," Phelan said. "I just held that thing against my shoulder pad like it was my first-born."

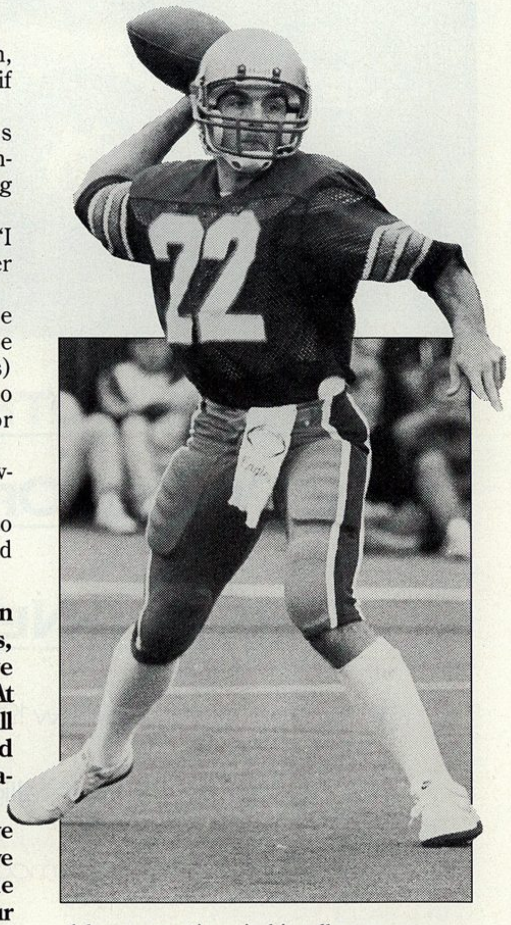

Flutie (34-of-46, 472 yards, three TDs) and Miami counterpart Bernie Kosar (25-of-38, 447 yards, two TDs) shattered the NCAA record for two players each passing for 250 yards or more in the same game.

The game will be remembered, however, for one long play.

"Somebody was definitely listening to us," Bicknell said, "because we needed that one."

AT&T honors Division I-A players in six Long Distance football categories, by contributing to their respective school's General Scholarship Fund. At the conclusion of the season, AT&T will present Long Distance Awards and scholarship donations based on season-long statistics.

At AT&T, we honor players who've reached their goals on the field and we help others reach their goals off the field. Look for announcements in your local paper each week to see if your favorite players win the AT&T Long Distance Awards.

A hero many times in his college career, Doug Flutie reached new heights against Miami in 1984.

How many times have you heard the TV color man say: "Uh-Oh. They're in the Prevent defense."?

SNATCHING DEFEAT FROM THE JAWS OF VICTORY

The defensive scheme that's an offensive dream; that's the widely practiced yet equally criticized Prevent Defense.

BY LARRY BORTSTEIN

Five receivers fan out down the field.

The quarterback, his team losing by six points, throws a spiral as secondary defenders, two of them sent into the game for this one play, race wildly to cover everybody.

Well, not quite everybody.

The ball majestically lands in the outstretched hands of one receiver who lopes untouched into the end zone.

Score one for the prevent defense.

Yes, another seemingly certain victory has been prevented.

Everyone has seen or attended a "cliffhanger," or has a favorite story about one.

The NCAA applies that label to games won on the final play and since 1971 has officially kept tabs on each major college game decided that way.

Of the 90 "cliffhangers" in Division 1-A games between 1971-90, 22—nearly 25 percent—were won on a last-ditch pass play—most recently the Nov. 3, 1990, game between Southern Mississippi and Southwestern Louisiana.

In that game, Southern Miss quarterback Brett Favre connected on an 11-yard scoring pass to Michael Welch on the final play to tie the score 13-13. Jim Taylor won it with his extra point kick.

That's interesting enough, but consider that 59 of those cliffhangers—nearly two-thirds—were won by field goals on the last play.

How many of those field goals, asks Chris Allen, USC's associate head coach and defensive coordinator, were the result together by a team from southern France last year, Les Argonautes. They amassed over $200,000 in sponsorship by going after large corporations, such as the French airline UTA. With the money, they hired three Canadian coaches, bought heavy workout equipment like blocking sleds and had enough left over to get an ex-pro Canadian to play for them.

THE POWER OF INTELLIGENT ENGINEERING.

FRENCH FOOTBALL

Many of the French teams have cheerleaders, usually the girlfriends of players.

The Argonautes rolled over opponents on their way to an undefeated season and brought home the coveted Casque D'Or (The Golden Helmet Award) which is kind of like the French version of the Vince Lombardi trophy. The Argonautes success story makes it evident that French football is once again entering a new stage, as fan interest grows and more money becomes available, it seems likely that there will be some sort of semi-pro offshoot of the FFFA in the near future.

For the majority of teams though, they're just a bunch of weekend warriors having fun. For some Americans, the league has given them a great opportunity to really experience a foreign country. Tom Kelley and Jered Wagner, both recent graduates of Santa Clara University, learned about the FFFA through a teammate who had played in France the previous season. He also said he could probably get them invited to play if they were interested.

Both Kelley and Wagner, who had already been planning a European adventure before going to work in "the real world," were up for the idea. One week later, they were contacted by the captain of the Paris Rangers and stockbroker, Didier Zouari, and a serious contract was negotiated. For their part, the two Americans would both play for and coach the Rangers for one season. In return, they would receive: round-trip plane fare, room and board with a French player's family, a monthly Metro (subway) pass and $100 a week in "beer money."

> "...how do you teach violence? Some of the French players get it and some don't."
> —Jered Wagner

"It was an offer we couldn't refuse," said Kelley.

Kelley and Wagner showed up to their first practice not knowing exactly what to expect. They had some ideas about offensive and defensive formations they wanted to teach the team. They quickly realized that they were getting a little ahead of themselves. "We would try and run a simple running play and it wouldn't work because our linemen didn't know the proper blocking techniques or footwork," remembers Wagner. "You have to keep reminding yourself that these guys didn't grow up playing this game."

Another challenge has been with teaching the contact part of the game. "A lot of these guys aren't used to really hitting," explained Wagner. "Football is a violent game, how do you teach violence? Some of the French players get it and some don't." So, going back to the fundamentals, Kelley and Wagner are trying to make contenders out of the Rangers.

The level of contact may be much less than what they are used to but the two Americans are paying their dues. They each play both ways. Kelley, 22, who played fullback at Santa Clara, has played guard, tackle, tight end, fullback, linebacker, defensive end and noseguard since arriving in France. Wagner, 23, a strong safety at S.C., who has a similar list of accreditations to his name, lost count after making 27 tackles in a recent game.

The coaching part of the job doesn't get much easier. "Trying to coach and play at the same time is not the optimum situation," said Wagner. Kelley, whose French abruptly ends at "bonjour," calls the play in the huddle in English, then one of the players translates it into French.

It's easy to smile at the thought of the French playing football. Images of players in berets and shoulder pads, drinking wine and eating Camembert at halftime, may come to mind. But these guys deserve credit, it's not easy being a football player in France.

First of all, it's expensive. In addition to team and league fees, each player must furnish his own equipment, which can run upwards of $700. The playing conditions are less than perfect. Grass is a luxury, they usually play on converted dirt rugby fields, and the road trips can be brutal. For a recent game in Grenoble, in southern France, the Rangers met at midnight on a Saturday, took an eight-and-a-half-hour bus ride to Grenoble, ate breakfast, played a game at 1 p.m. Sunday, lost, showered, ate dinner and by 6 p.m. they were back on the bus that would arrive at 2 a.m. in Paris, most trying to forget that they had to go to work in just a few hours.

American football in France has come a long way since the days when Laurent Plegelatte's Spartacus were a team in search of an opponent. With the beginning of youth leagues, high school programs and the success of teams like the Argonautes, the future of American football in France looks pretty healthy. Who knows? Maybe one day the NFL will have a team with a starting quarterback whose name is Pierre or Jean Claude but, until then, as Monsieur Plegelatte would probably say, "vive le football Americain!"

The truth about the National Guard will blow you away.

We live next door to you.

We work with you. We teach your children. Build your homes. Pilot and maintain commercial airlines. Even repair your automobiles.

We're from all walks of life. And while we're really no different from you, something very important sets us apart.

We're America's citizen-soldiers. Dedicated to coming to your aid at a moment's notice. To protect your home. And defend our homeland. Yet, most Americans are unaware of just how many ways they depend on us.

On the frontline in Operation Desert Storm. On the frontline in the War on Drugs. On the frontline in local and state emergencies. On the frontline in nation-building efforts around the world. The Guard is there, defending the National interest, protecting our citizens and adding value to our states and nation.

The truth is that almost half the Army's combat units belong to the Army National Guard. You'll find us using the latest technology and equipment. From state of the art artillery units in Desert Storm to engineering and medical units helping our international neighbors.

And the Air National Guard? Today, we're a major contributor in all Air Force missions. From frontline fighter aircraft, medical evacuation and engineering units, to tactical and strategic airlift, and aerial refueling aircraft. We were airborne in the first hours of Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

We face other enemies, too. Fighting alongside the U.S. Border Patrol and U.S. Customs Service, we help keep millions of dollars worth of illegal drugs from ever reaching our children.

The National Guard was formed to protect our colonies over 350 years ago. Close to 186,000 Guardsmen were killed or wounded overseas during World War II. Almost the same number were called to action during the Korean War. In Vietnam, Guardsmen received over 1,700 medals for bravery. In Operation Desert Storm, 72,000 Guardsmen were called to duty with over 40,000 serving in the Gulf.

Unlike other branches of the Armed Forces, the National Guard's charge is two-fold. Times of disaster, strife and need find the National Guard always ready to lend a hand—whether it's halfway around the world or right in our own backyard.

The National Guard is the finest men and women of your hometown. We're skilled. Capable. Intelligent. We're Americans at their best.

And that's the truth.

NATIONAL GUARD

Americans At Their Best.

SNATCHING DEFEAT

of teams employing the so-called prevent defense?

"That term 'prevent defense' is a misnomer," Allen alleged.

"If you're succeeding on defense and then change what you're doing to suit a certain game situation, you're not doing the smart thing," Allen said.

Actually, Allen, along with defensive coordinators at two other major programs, believes there is a place for the prevent.

"Sometimes you have to rush an extra man or put in a nickel man on the secondary," said Allen, who has worked for Trojan Head Coach Larry Smith at both Arizona and USC, moving with him to Los Angeles in January, 1987.

"It depends on what you're trying to prevent—a team from getting into field goal range to win the game or a long pass to win it," Allen said.

At Florida State, defensive coordinator Mickey Andrews said, the offense and defense practice hurry-up drills several times each week.

"We line up like time is running out in a game and we ask the offense to try to score in one minute or two minutes," Andrews said.

"The defense will rush the passer with an extra man and we'll have an extra man going back deep on pass coverage," he went on. "That's what that kind of defense is all about—either try to stop the quarterback from getting the pass off or, if he does get it off, keep a receiver from catching it."

> "We don't call it a 'prevent defense.' That sounds negative. We call it our 'victory defense.'"
> —Chris Allen

At Penn State, Jerry Sandusky said, "We try to tell our people in those situations to try to keep the ball out of the air. By that I mean even if the quarterback throws, we want to knock the ball down and we'll try to do that instead of going for the interception. A lot of funny things—deflections, tipped balls, and all that—can happen when the ball is in the air and a lot of people are going after it."

USC's Allen points to the final seconds of the Trojans' 1990 game against Pac-10 rival Arizona State as an example of how his team plays the prevent defense.

USC was leading 13-6 and the Sun Devils had the ball for one last series starting from their 18. A tough job for Arizona State, but not impossible with their fine quarterback, Paul Justin, directing the attack.

Justin immediately got his team out of a hole by completing a pass to Eric Moss to the Sun Devil 45.

"With time running out, we knew he'd have to keep throwing, but instead of making switches in personnel we kept our regular people in the game," Allen recalled.

"They're the ones that have been playing well for us all day, so we just ask them to keep doing what they've been doing. Except maybe we'll go after the passer a little harder."

Justin's next pass was incomplete. Then, with 12 seconds to go and pressure coming at him from both sides, Justin was hit just as he let go a wobbly pass, which easily was broken up by Terry McDaniels.

With eight seconds left, the Trojan line again came after Justin, who this time tried to go deep. But Stephon Pace in the Trojan secondary knocked the ball away.

The Sun Devils were penalized for illegal procedure back to their 40, the origin of their final play of the afternoon.

This time Justin cut one loose for Kevin Snyder, but Matt Gee broke it up and USC held on to its seven-point victory in a key Pac-10 matchup.

"We don't call it a 'prevent defense,' " Allen said. "That sounds negative. We call it our 'victory defense.' And that's what it turned out to be in that game."

At Penn State, the Nittany Lions' Sandusky, a veteran of 20 years under Joe Paterno, pointed out, "We haven't usually had big people in our secondary so we've always stressed good, solid coverage.

"Sure, we'll use the nickel back, a fifth man back there, when the situation warrants. We just don't believe the situation warrants it that often. If we're in our regular coverage all day and it's doing well, we just won't change it just to be changing it."

An exception to that practice, Sandusky said, might be when it's the last play of the game and victory or defeat is at stake.

"Then you'll try to rush everyone you can and cover everyone you can because there's no margin or mistake," Sandusky said.

"The whole thing is you try to avoid getting into that situation in the first place. But there's no way you can always prevent it, so you have to be ready for it."

Florida State's Andrews, who's been on the job in Tallahassee for eight years, said game situations are the chief factor in determining what kind of defense is employed—and who'll be on the field.

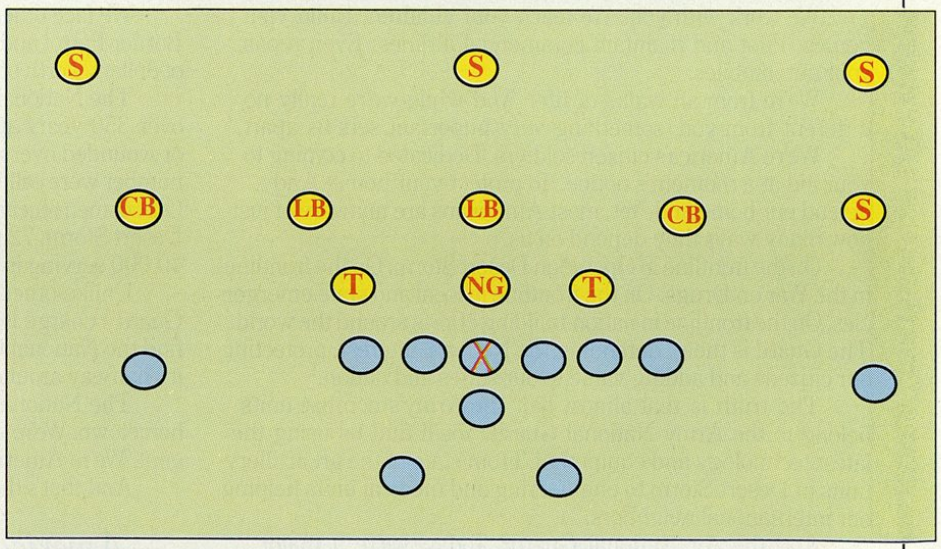

"If the other team needs a field goal to tie or win, that's a different matter than them needing a touchdown, so you play accordingly," Andrews said.

"In either case, you don't want them to be in position to win the football game. But if a field goal will win it, field position becomes a real important factor. Sometimes, you'll let the other team have the short gainers, but when a field goal can win the game, those short gainers can add up and get their kicker into his range."

The ideal situation, Andrews said, is to get the opposing offense into a situation where they have to try to do something they don't really want to try.

"If their passing game isn't that strong or ued to grow and along with it, so did the level of competition. Teams began actively recruiting Americans and Canadians living in France. With more foreign players joining the league, new rules were quickly instated limiting teams to no more than a combination of two players from either the United States, Canada, Mexico or Japan. (Mexico or Japan?) The only other major rule is that a player from one of these four countries cannot play at quarterback.

Parisian students, lawyers, stockbrokers and even art gallery owners were lining up to put on the pads and start banging their heads together on weekends, a pretty amazing trend in a country where a bicycle race is the sporting event of the year.

Teams started attracting local sponsorship, usually receiving around $3,000, which they used to cover expenses like new uniforms or for renting a bus for road games. Some teams raised as much as $10,000 and could afford to hire a coach or a foreign player for their eight-game season, but nothing compared to the deal put their quarterback is having a bad day, well, you might not get hurt if the game comes down to them having to complete a pass or two," Andrews said.

"Maybe their fullback has been running on you all day, but with the football game on the line and time running out, it's unlikely they'd be trying to run the ball. So they just about have to throw and you've got them where you want them."

In last year's Southern Miss-Southwestern Louisiana game—the one the former won on the final play—the winners couldn't have cut things any closer.

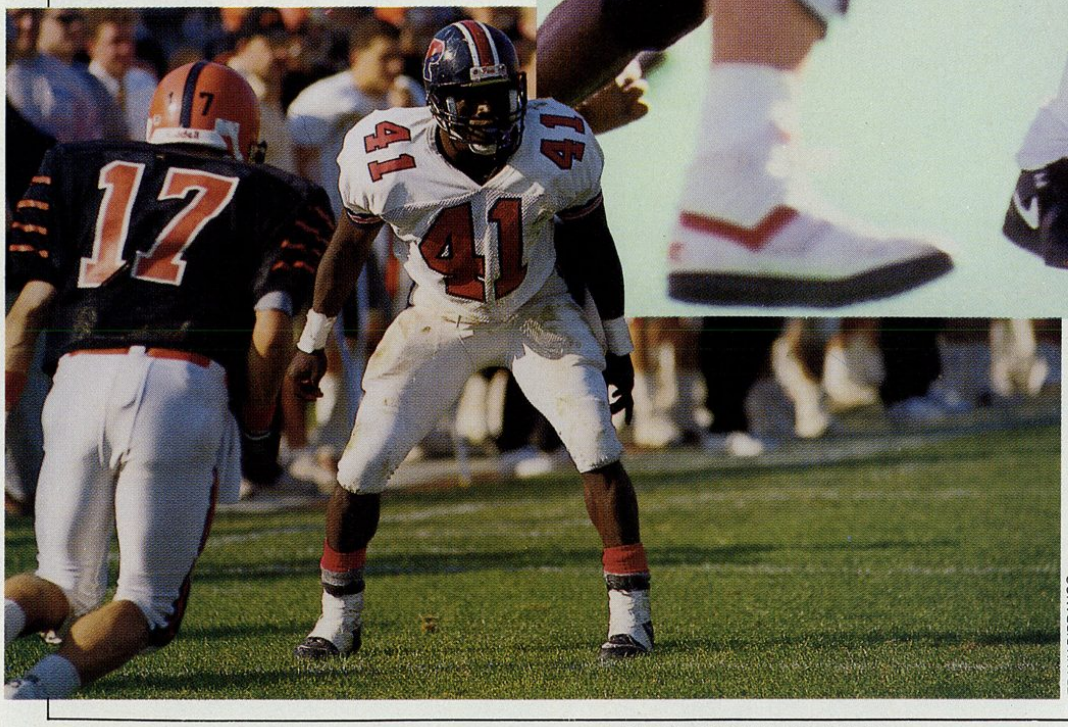

Favre's final pass to Welch—a substitute who made a circus catch deep in the end zone over defenders—came on fourth and six from the 11.

"I don't know if they were in a prevent defense or not," recalled a Southern Miss spokesman.

"They didn't really have to be since they were stopping us pretty easily already. It was a great pass and a great catch that won that game for us, not our taking advantage of a different defense."

American football has become France's newest nutty import.

Until recently, if you happened to be in Paris, strolling down the Champs Elysees and you overheard two Frenchmen having a heated discussion about yesterday's football match, you could be certain they were talking about a game where a bunch of guys in shorts run up and down a field, kicking a little black and white ball around. Then, a man named Laurent Plegelatte came along and changed the course of French football history.

In 1980, Plegelatte, a high school gym teacher in Paris, was vacationing in Canada when he was introduced to a new sport, "American style" football. He liked the game so much that he brought 24 sets of helmets and pads back with him to France.

By 1982, Plegelatte had organized a six team league and the Federation Français de Football Americain (FFFA) was born. Today there are more than 60 teams with three different levels of competition. In addition, there is a new 18-and-under junior league, a French national team, and flag-football is being introduced into many high school sports programs.

Parisian students, lawyers, stockbrokers and even art gallery owners were lining up to put on the pads and start banging heads together on weekends...

"Back in '82, the league was much different than today," recalled Didier Zouari, the captain of a team from Paris, Les Rangers, and one of the early French players to step on a gridiron. "Guys were playing in homemade equipment and getting a field properly marked with yard lines was next to impossible."

At that time there weren't many Americans playing, just a handful of U.S. Marines who happened to be stationed in Paris. The popularity of the league contin-

Palmolive® Softest Hands

A Six-Part Series Saluting College Football's Greatest Receivers

SOFT-HANDED UPSETS

By Bert Randolph Sugar

The word "upset" is defined by Noah Webster as: "To defeat unexpectedly." And so, the word "upset" has been appropriated by the world of sports; and nowhere has the usage been invoked more than in the world of collegiate football.

Take the 1961 Texas-TCU game, for instance. Texas was on the verge of becoming the first national champion from the Southwest Conference since 1939, a 25-point favorite to beat outmanned and outgunned TCU. But even though the Horned Frogs were outmanned and outgunned, they weren't outgutted, as quarterback Sonny Gibbs and end Buddy Iles proved.

The story line of the game was, simply stated, that TCU made the big plays and Texas didn't, including one plumb-perfect flea-flicker of a play in the second quarter. The play saw Gibbs take the ball from center and hand it off to halfback Larry Thomas, who, in turn, tossed it back to Gibbs while end Iles feinted a block at some orange-jerseyed Texas lineman and scurried off downfield. Gibbs retreated, far behind the original 50-yard line of scrimmage and managed to release the ball somewhere in the general direction of Iles before he was slammed to the turf by an orange blur of jerseys. Iles, streaking downfield, engulfed the perfect spiral, shook off the last desperate attempt by the defender and tumbled across the Longhorn goal line with the only score of the game safely cradled in his soft hands for a 6-0 TCU "upset."

College football has produced other never-to-be-forgotten "upsets." There was UCLA's unbelievable "upset" of unbeaten Ohio State in the 1976 Rose Bowl after losing to the Buckeyes 41-20 during the regular season, as quarterback John Sciarra and receiver Wally Henry combined for two crucial TD's to beat the Archie Griffin-led Buckeyes 23-10.

And then there was the 1939 version of the same game when a Duke team that was undefeated, untied and unscored upon went into the Rose Bowl to face a Southern Cal team that had lost two games during the '38 season. Duke came out on the short end of a 7-3 score when, with less than a minute to play in the game, reserve quarterback Doyle Nave hit reserve end Al Krueger with a 14-yard touchdown pass.

But the greatest "upset" of all time, hands down—or is that soft hands down?—occurred back in 1947 when little Columbia faced a mighty Army team, proud possessors of a 32-game undefeated streak which had seen them score an average of almost 40 points a game while holding their opponents to fewer than five points a game. True to their press clippings, the Cadets jumped off to a 14-0 lead. But with Columbia quarterback Gene Rossides throwing and left end Bill Swiacki catching, the Lions came to life, and by the end of the third quarter, although behind 20-7, had Army on the run with their passing game.

Rossides and Swiacki teamed up for a 28-yard touchdown pass, made possible by a diving, acrobatic catch by Swiacki, to move Columbia to within six, 20-14.

Then, with the sand in their hourglass beginning to dwindle, Lion quarterback Rossides found a twisting, turning Swiacki far downfield.

Looking for the pass over his right shoulder, Swiacki turned his head and body at the last minute and reached out in the opposite direction for the ball, which he snared just as it began to tumble groundward.

The jubilant Lions rode the strong arm of Rossides and the soft hands of Swiacki for a total of nine catches and 148 yards to beat Army 21-20 and pull off the "Upset of the Century" by anybody's definition.

THE BAY AIR-EA

until coach Jimmy Aiken adopted the T. The Ducks went 9-1 in 1948, and Van Brocklin went on to a great pro career.

Chuck Taylor continued Stanford's passing excellence when he became head coach in 1951. Taylor, a former All-American lineman under Shaughnessy, directed Stanford to the Rose Bowl his rookie year behind quarterback Gary Kerkorian.

His successor was Bobby Garrett, the NCAA passing champion and an All-American in 1953, a season in which he set a conference record with 17 TD passes and threw for 324 yards against mighty USC. Then came Brodie, an Oaklander who was the NCAA's No. 1 passer as an All-American in 1956, completing a conference-record 139 passes that season.

"I credit Stanford's image of the '50s for all the great quarterbacks from Northern California," Robinson said.

"The whole area has a tradition of putting the ball in the air," observed Paul Wiggin, an All-American lineman at Stanford in the '50s and later the coach of his alma mater.

The Bay Area's prolific passing continued in the '60s. Morton and Berry, both prep stars in the Santa Clara Valley, shared All-American honors as college seniors in 1964, the latter at Oregon.

John Ralston, a Cal grad, became Stanford's coach and intended to run the ball to success, as he did at Utah State. Plunkett convinced him otherwise, launching a three-year career which resulted in 52 touchdowns, 7,809 yards and a senior year crowned with a Heisman Trophy and a Rose Bowl upset of Ohio State.

"I believed we could win by running off tackle when I got to Stanford," Ralston conceded. "But I was bumping my head against the wall. Players at USC and other schools were physically superior, so we had to do something else. Plunkett was a pure passer, and we took off with him."

Ralston had competent help in making the transition to the passing game. When assistants White and Roger Theder departed Stanford and switched to Cal in 1972, the Golden Bears immediately gained passing prominence with the likes of Bartkowski, Ferragamo, Roth and Campbell. Bartkowski was the NCAA passing champion and an All-American in 1974.

The legacy was enhanced at Stanford when Walsh began his head coaching career in 1977 and developed Benjamin into the NCAA passing champion. He proved it was no fluke when Dils earned similar honors in 1978. When Walsh moved to the 49ers in 1979, Rod Dowhower replaced him at Stanford and Schonert made it three national passing titles in a row.

Elway assumed the quarterback duties in 1980, never winning a passing crown while generally being acknowledged as the greatest quarterback in Stanford history.

Campbell got into the act by setting NCAA records with 21 consecutive completions, a .707 season percentage and a .644 career percentage for Cal.

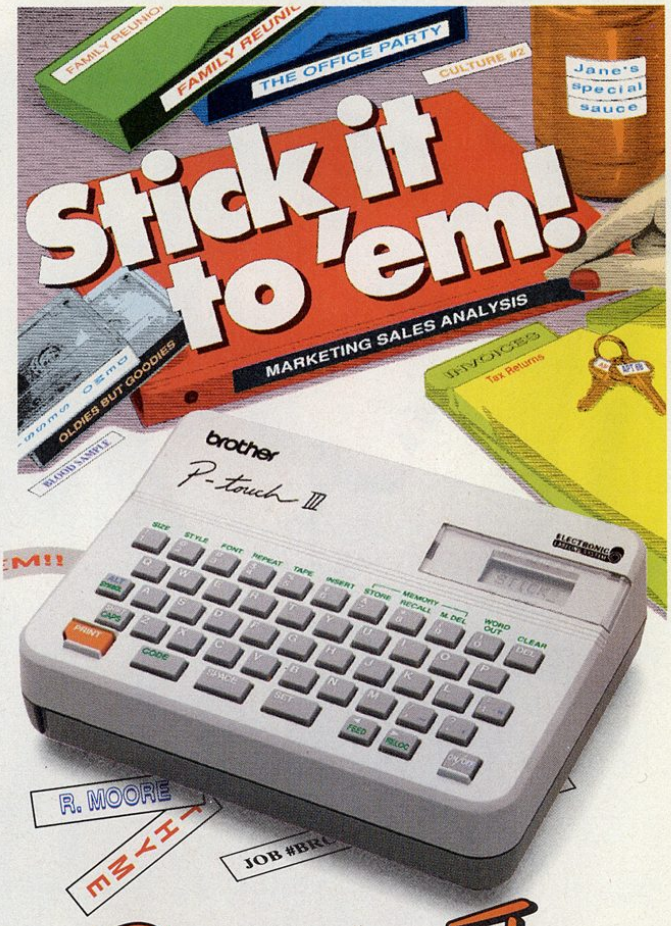

By 1982, MSU's Rogers and Illinois' White already had challenged the old order of the Big 10, which no longer was a run-oriented conference. White used his Northern California roots to attract Eason from Walnut Grove, near Sacramento, and Trudeau from Livermore.

"The Big 10 started to change its thinking and became more competitive about that time," White said. "The rest of us may not have been on a par with Michigan and Ohio State, but we could give them a game."

Four Northern Californians were especially proficient passing the ball during the mid-'80s: Robbie Bosco of Roseville, near Sacramento, who took over for McMahon at BYU; Santos, for the valley town of Selma, who thrived under Scovil at San Diego State; Mike Perez of San Jose State; and Kevin Sweeney, who played for his father, Jim, at Fresno State.

The most recent rage is UOP's Kopp, who burst upon the national scene last fall with outrageous performances in three consecutive October games for Harris' run and shoot.

With Kopp back this season, Northern California's passing tradition remains alive and well.

Rogaine®
TOPICAL SOLUTION minoxidil 2%

The only product proven to grow hair.

What is ROGAINE?

ROGAINE Topical Solution, discovered and made by The Upjohn Company, is a standardized topical (for use only on the skin) prescription medication proved effective for the long-term treatment of male pattern baldness of the crown.

ROGAINE is the only topical solution of minoxidil. Minoxidil in tablet form has been used since 1980 to lower blood pressure. The use of minoxidil tablets is limited to treatment of patients with severe high blood pressure. When a high enough dosage in tablet form is used to lower blood pressure, certain effects that merit your attention may occur. These effects appear to be dose related.

Persons who use ROGAINE Topical Solution have a low level of absorption of minoxidil, much lower than that of persons being treated with minoxidil tablets for high blood pressure. Therefore, the likelihood that a person using ROGAINE Topical Solution will develop the effects associated with minoxidil tablets is very small. In fact, none of these effects has been directly attributed to ROGAINE in clinical studies.

How soon can I expect results from using ROGAINE?

Studies have shown that the response to treatment with ROGAINE may vary widely.

Some men receiving ROGAINE may see faster results than others; others may respond with a slower rate of hair growth. You should not expect visible growth in less than four months.

If I respond to ROGAINE, what will the hair look like?

If you have very little hair and respond to treatment, your first hair growth may be soft, downy, colorless hair that is barely visible. After further treatment the new hair should be the same color and thickness as the other hair on your scalp. If you start with substantial hair, the new hair should be of the same color and thickness as the rest of your hair.

How long do I need to use ROGAINE?

ROGAINE is a treatment, not a cure. If you respond to treatment, you will need to continue using ROGAINE to maintain or increase hair growth. If you do not begin to show a response to treatment with ROGAINE after a reasonable period of time (at least four months or more), your doctor may advise you to discontinue using ROGAINE.

What happens if I stop using ROGAINE? Will I keep the new hair?

If you stop using ROGAINE, you will probably shed the new hair within a few months after stopping treatment.

What is the dosage of ROGAINE?

You should apply a 1 mL dose of ROGAINE two times a day, once in the morning and once at night, before bedtime. Each bottle should last about 30 days (one month). The applicators in each package of ROGAINE are designed to apply the correct amount of ROGAINE with each application. Please refer to the Instructions for Use.

What if I miss a dose or forget to use ROGAINE?

If you miss one or two daily applications of ROGAINE, you should restart your twice-daily application and return to your usual schedule. You should not attempt to make up for missed applications.

Can I use ROGAINE more than twice a day? Will it work faster?

No. Studies by The Upjohn Company have been carefully conducted to determine the correct amount of ROGAINE to use to obtain the most satisfactory results. More frequent applications or use of larger doses (more than one mL twice a day) have not been shown to speed up the process of hair growth and may increase the possibility of side effects.

What are the most common side effects reported in clinical studies with ROGAINE?

Studies of patients using ROGAINE have shown that the most common adverse effects directly attributable to ROGAINE Topical Solution were itching and other skin irritations of the treated area of the scalp. About 5% of patients had these complaints.

Other side effects, including light-headedness, dizziness, and headaches were reported by patients using ROGAINE or placebo (a similar solution without the active medication).

What are some of the side effects people have reported?

The frequency of side effects listed below was similar, except for dermatologic reactions, in the ROGAINE and placebo groups. Respiratory (bronchitis, upper respiratory infection, sinusitis); Dermatologic (irritant or allergic contact dermatitis, eczema, hypertrichosis, local erythema, pruritus, dry skin/scalp flaking, exacerbation of hair loss, alopecia); Gastrointestinal (diarrhea, nausea, vomiting); Neurology (headache, dizziness, faintness, light-headedness); Musculoskeletal (fractures, back pain, tendinitis); Cardiovascular (edema, chest pain, blood pressure increases/decreases, palpitation, pulse rate increases/decreases); Allergy (nonspecific allergic reactions, hives, allergic rhinitis, facial swelling and sensitivity); Special Senses (conjunctivitis, ear infections, vertigo, visual disturbances, including decreased visual acuity); Metabolic-Nutritional (edema, weight gain); Urinary Tract (urinary tract infections, renal calculi, urethritis); Genital Tract (prostatitis, epididymitis, sexual dysfunction); Psychiatric (anxiety, depression, fatigue); Hematology (lymphadenopathy, thrombocytopenia); Endocrine.

Individuals who are hypersensitive to minoxidil, propylene glycol, or ethanol must not use ROGAINE.

ROGAINE Topical Solution contains alcohol, which could cause burning or irritation of the eyes, mucous membranes, or sensitive skin areas. If ROGAINE accidentally gets into these areas, bathe the area with large amounts of cool tap water. Contact your doctor if irritation persists.

What are the possible side effects that could affect the heart and circulation when using ROGAINE?

Although serious side effects have not been attributed to ROGAINE in clinical studies, there is a possibility that they could occur because the active ingredient in ROGAINE Topical Solution is the same as in minoxidil tablets.

Minoxidil tablets are used to treat high blood pressure. Minoxidil tablets lower blood pressure by relaxing the arteries, an effect called vasodilation. Vasodilation leads to retention of fluid and increased heart rate. The following effects have occurred in some patients taking minoxidil tablets for high blood pressure:

Increased heart rate—some patients have reported that their resting heart rate increased by more than 20 beats per minute; Rapid weight gain of more than 5 pounds or swelling (edema) of the face, hands, ankles, or stomach area; Difficulty in breathing, especially when lying down, a result of an increase in body fluids or fluid around the heart; Worsening of, or new onset of, angina pectoris.

When ROGAINE Topical Solution is used on normal skin, very little minoxidil is absorbed and the possible effects attributed to minoxidil tablets are not expected with the use of ROGAINE. If, however, you experience any of the possible side effects listed, discontinue use of ROGAINE and consult your doctor. Presumably, such effects would be most likely if greater absorption occurred, e.g., because ROGAINE was used on damaged or inflamed skin or in greater than recommended amounts.

In animal studies, minoxidil, in doses higher than would be obtained from topical use in people, has caused important heart structure damage. This kind of damage has not been seen in humans given minoxidil tablets for high blood pressure at effective doses.

What factors may increase the risk of serious side effects with ROGAINE?

Individuals with known or suspected underlying coronary artery disease or the presence of or predisposition to heart failure would be at particular risk if systemic effects (that is, increased heart rate or fluid retention) of minoxidil were to occur. Physicians, and patients with these kinds of underlying diseases, should be conscious of the potential risk of treatment if they choose to use ROGAINE.

ROGAINE should be applied only to the scalp and should not be used on other parts of the body, because absorption of minoxidil may be increased and the risk of side effects may become greater. You should not use ROGAINE if your scalp becomes irritated or is sunburned, and you should not use it along with other topical treatment medication on your scalp.

Can men with high blood pressure use ROGAINE?

Individuals with hypertension, including those under treatment with antihypertensive agents, can use ROGAINE but should be monitored closely by their doctor. Patients taking guanethidine for high blood pressure should not use ROGAINE.

Should any precautions be followed?

Individuals using ROGAINE should be monitored by their physician one month after starting ROGAINE and at least every six months afterward. Discontinue ROGAINE if systemic effects occur.

Do not use it in conjunction with other topical agents such as corticosteroids, retinoids and petrolatum or agents that enhance percutaneous absorption. ROGAINE is for topical use only. Each mL contains 20 mg minoxidil and accidental ingestion could cause adverse systemic effects.

No carcinogenicity was found with topical application. ROGAINE should not be used by pregnant women or by nursing mothers. The effects on labor and delivery are not known. Pediatric use: Safety and effectiveness has not been established under age 18.

Caution: Federal law prohibits dispensing without a prescription. You must see a doctor to receive a prescription.

THE BAY AIR-EA

ness the explosion at Miami, Texas and Houston—but there was a time not too long ago when many of the nation's finest passers claimed a Bay Area background.

Coaches schooled in this tradition soon began spreading the wealth. Mike White went to Illinois, where he was to influence quarterbacks Dave Wilson, Tony Eason, Jack Trudeau and Jeff George. Darryl Rogers shifted from the West Coast to Michigan State. Dennis Green brought the passing game to Northwestern.

The Bay Area had its heyday during the aerial explosion of the '70s. John Ralston, who attended Cal, coached Stanford to back-to-back Rose Bowl triumphs with quarterbacks Jim Plunkett and Don Bunce and White as his top offensive assistant.

Of the nine NCAA passing champions from 1973 through 1981, eight had Northern California roots, from Jesse Freitas of San Diego State to Jim McMahon of Brigham Young. During that same era, White developed Steve Bartkowski, Joe Roth and Rich Campbell at the University of California, while Bill Walsh was doing likewise with Guy Benjamin, Steve Dils and Turk Schonert at Stanford.

If you're still not convinced, consider these facts:

- Stanford produced six NCAA passing champions, from Bobby Garrett in 1953 to Schonert in 1979. Seven different Cardinal quarterbacks have attained All-American distinction from Frankie Albert in 1940 to John Elway in 1982.
- Cal is the only college in the nation to produce three Super Bowl quarterbacks: Joe Kapp (Vikings), Craig Morton (Cowboys and Broncos) and Vince Ferragamo (Rams). Marv Levy, who recruited Morton as the Golden Bears' coach in 1961 and had Walsh and White as assistants, made it as coach of the Bills this year.
- Walsh, who reached the pinnacle of coaching success with three Super Bowl victories, attended San Jose State; worked with Morton as a Cal assistant; developed Ken Anderson and Dan Fouts as an NFL aide; coached Benjamin and Dils to back-to-back passing titles at Stanford; turned Steve DeBerg into the NFL's most prolific passer with the 49ers in 1979; and guided Montana to fame and fortune in the '80s.
- White, now a Raiders' coach, attended the same high school (Acalanes of Lafayette) that spawned Norm Van Brocklin; played with Kapp at Cal; worked with Morton and Plunkett as an assistant; and continued grooming outstanding quarterback talent as the head coach at Cal and Illinois.
- The fertile Santa Clara Valley produces blue-chip quarterbacks along with computer chips. It is the home of San Jose State, which turned Walsh and Dick Vermeil into master coaches. Dan Pastorini, Bob Berry, Morton, Bartkowski, Plunkett, McMahon and Campbell are among quarterbacks reared in the area.
- The Sacramento-Stockton area also has produced its share of top-notch quarterbacks, beginning with Pacific's Eddie LeBaron down to UOP's Troy Kopp, who averaged 364 yards of total offense as a sophomore in 1990 with coach Walt Harris' run and shoot.

The Northern California passing tradition began more than 50 years ago when Clark Shaughnessy revived a Stanford squad that had gone 1-7-1 in 1939. He converted Albert from a single-wing tailback to a T-quarterback, and the rest, as they say, is history.

Albert used the new offense to guide Stanford to a 10-0 record in 1940, including a Rose Bowl victory over Nebraska.

The other diminutive quarterbacks continued the Bay Area trend in the mid-'40s. In 1946, the 16-year-old LeBaron became the youngest college gridder in the nation for Pacific in nearby Stockton. LeBaron, a three-time Little All-American, quarterbacked the 1950 College All-Stars to a 17-7 upset of the Philadelphia Eagles.

"The pros weren't that much of an influence in those days," explained former USC coach John Robinson, who grew up with boyhood chum John Madden in Daly City, just south of San Francisco. "I really think it was the other way around, because the 49ers didn't start until 1946.

The first great pro-style passer from the Bay Area was Van Brocklin. The Dutch-man was a fourth-string tailback at Oregon

Medical studies reveal...

The earlier you use Rogaine, the better your chances of growing hair.

Rogaine is the only product ever proven to grow hair. And studies show that using it at the first signs of hair loss gives you the best chance that it will grow hair for you.

What are the early warning signs of losing hair?

Everyone loses a little hair. Fifty to 80 hairs a day is normal. If you're losing more than 100 hairs a day without normal replacement, the first sign will often be thinning of the "crown" at the top of your scalp. See your doctor when you first notice it, because this small bald spot can grow larger over time.

"I may not have grown any hair after 6 months, but most of my hair's stopped falling out. I'm glad I got to the doctor fast." —Luis Silva, 20

Two million men worldwide have tried Rogaine. In year-long clinical tests conducted by dermatologists at 27 medical centers nationwide, virtually half (48%) of the men who tried Rogaine saw at least moderate hair regrowth. Thirty-six percent had minimal regrowth and only 16% had no regrowth.

Doctors also found that it usually takes 4 months or more before you can begin to evaluate your use of Rogaine. Side effects were minimal: only 5% of the men tested had itching of the scalp.

Will Rogaine work for you?

Only a dermatologist or other doctor who treats hair loss can tell you, so see one soon. The sooner you get your prescription for Rogaine (which is now available in an economical three-pack), the sooner you could be growing hair.

For more information, a list of doctors in your area who can help you, and a certificate worth $10 as an incentive to visit your doctor, call the toll-free number below.

Great Comebacks and Other "Against All Odds" College Football Stories — presented by Rogaine.

Miraculous Finishes

The Leland Stanford Junior University Marching Band has always marched to another drummer–another trombone player, another tuba player, another bugler and others too numerous to mention. And when they marched they marched in any direction they chose, often in the wrong direction. And there was at least one time when they marched at the wrong time. That time came in the 86th annual game between Stanford and its archrival, the University of California at Berkeley, back in 1982. Called the "Big

Cal's Kevin Moen, who scored the winning TD

Game," the Stanford-Cal game was played not only for the symbolic trophy given the winner, "The Axe," but also for bragging rights to the entire Bay Area.

On this day those bragging rights belonged to Cal as the underdog Golden Bears took a 19-17 lead into the closing minutes for an apparent upset. But Stanford's quarterback, the redoubtable John Elway, engineered one of his patented last-second drives and positioned his team for the go-ahead — and apparently game winning — field goal. As the ball shot through the uprights, the Stanford fans shot out of their seats and the Stanford Band got ready to tottle their way onto the field to celebrate the hard-earned, come-from-behind victory. But six ticks remained on the clock, and that was enough for the Cal Bears to pull out one of those "They-said-it-couldn't-be-done" finishes, with the help of the Stanford University Marching Band and an old rugby play concocted by their coach, Joe Kapp.

The ensuing short-hop kickoff was fielded by Cal back Kevin Moen, who picked it up and tossed it backwards, in a rugby-like lateral, to a teammate, who, in turn, did likewise, all the while advancing the ball downfield. At least five Cal players handled the ball like a hot potato. Then the first man to touch the ball, Moen, caught the last lateral and crashed into the end zone — and into an onrushing trombone player still adjusting his music and hurrying to make sure he didn't miss out on Stanford band's victory celebration — to score the winning touchdown in what will forever be known as "The Play." And as one of football's strangest moments.

Doug Flutie celebrates his game–winning throw.

It was unbelievable. It was impossible. The "it" was Boston College's Doug Flutie throwing a "Hail Mary" pass over the heads of the assembled University of Miami defenders on that magic 1984 afternoon to beat the top-ranked Hurricanes.

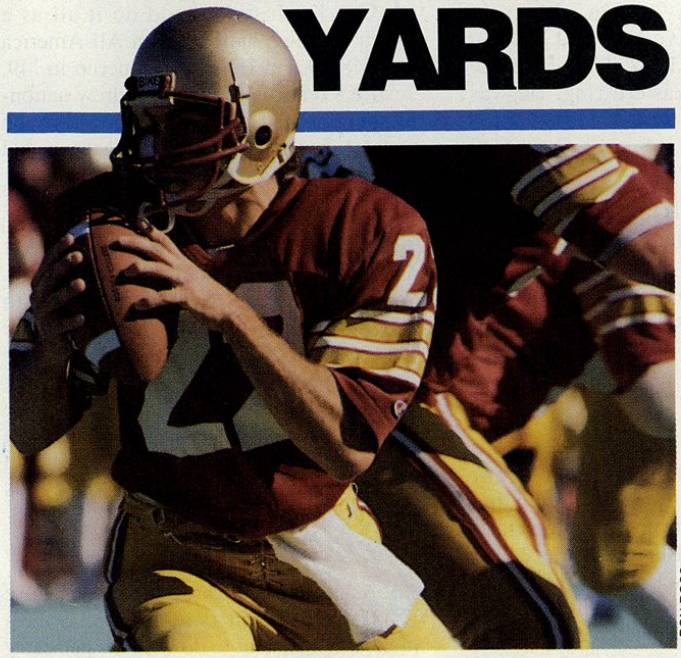

Miami had just taken the lead — and seemingly won the game — in the closing seconds as quarterback Bernie Kosar engineered his team into B.C.'s end zone for a 45-41 lead in a game that had seesawed back and forth all afternoon. But there was one more see to be seen (sawed?), and that belonged to Flutie, who, with scant seconds left on the Orange Bowl clock, unhinged his arm and threw one last-gasp pass somewhere in the direction of his favorite receiver, Gerard Phelan, standing in the end zone—but blanketed by a suffocating horde of Miami defenders. As the final seconds ticked off, the ball took flight and, in a one of those "they-said-it-couldn't-be-done" moments that continually abound in college football, threaded its way through, over and around the grasping hands of the Miami defenders into Phelan's outstretched arms for a miraculous 47-45 Boston College victory.

HOW SHARP ARE YOU?

NICKNAMES

1 Famous for baseball as well as football, Boston University's Harry Agannis threw for 34 touchdown passes in the 1951 & '52 seasons. He later starred with the Boston Red Sox, but was stricken by illness and died in 1955. He was known as the:

2 A teammate of George Gipp on Knute Rockne's 1919-20 teams, Heartley Anderson uttered the famous line at a 1921 pep rally "You do the best you can and I'll do the best we can." Also coached The Irish from 1931-33. He was known as:

3 In 1935-37, Fordham's Al Babartsky was one of the "Seven Blocks of Granite," a defensive line that did not allow one score in 1937. His nickname had a mysterious, Eastern ring. He was known as:

4 Madison Bell coached at TCU, Texas A&M and SMU in the 1920s, '30s and '40s, compiling a 154-87-17 lifetime record. He was known for making predictions of doom for his team each week, to gain a psychological advantage. His nickname was:

5 Army's Felix Blanchard won every trophy imaginable in 1945, including the Heisman. A great blocker and tackler, as well as a runner, Blanchard was called the "greatest fullback ever" by Pappy Waldorf. Interestingly enough, he never played pro ball. His two nicknames were:

6 As a tough tight end from Pittsburgh, Michael Ditka was a unanimous All-America in 1960. He then went on to the NFL for an illustrious career, first as a player and later as coach of the Chicago Bears. The nickname nails his personality right on the head:

7 One of the true legends of football, Charles Justice could do it all as a North Carolina halfback. An All-America in 1948-49 and Heisman runnerup in '49, Justice's feats on the gridiron drew national attention and made him a coverboy on several magazines. He ran as strong and fast as a locomotive. His nickname is:

8 Earle Neale was a three-sport star at West Virginia Wesleyan from 1912-14. An end in football, Neale led his team to three straight wins over West Virginia. Later, as a coach, he would be responsible for many football innovations, including man-to-man defense and the fake and triple reverse. His nickname was acquired when a boyhood friend saw him eating bread with butter running down his face. He was known as:

9 A halfback on three unbeaten Notre Dame teams in 1946-48, Emil Sitko's nickname had a lot to do with his per-carry average. He was known as:

10 As a coach at Michigan from 1901-25, Fielding Yost was famous for his point-a-minute teams. Yost acquired his nickname early in his career, as he yelled at his players to get moving after each play. He was known as:

BY NICK PETERS

There is a popular misconception, enhanced by a television commercial, that Western Pennsylvania is the cradle for great quarterbacks, producing the likes of Joe Namath (Beaver Falls), Joe Montana (Monongahela), Dan Marino (Pittsburgh) and Jim Kelly (East Brady).

Nick Peters covers baseball and college sports for the Sacramento Bee after specializing on Cal football and basketball during his days as sports editor of the defunct Berkeley Daily Gazette and later with the Oakland Tribune. He has authored "100 years of Cal Football" and "Giants Almanac."

That's an imposing lot, to be sure, yet the genesis of the passing game is better traced to Northern California, where outstanding quarterbacks have been cultivated over the last 50 years along with the agricultural riches of the Golden State.

It's pure coincidence that Montana became part of the Bay Area quarterback heritage when he joined the 49ers, but it's absolutely no accident that a region abundant with wine, redwoods, fruits and vegetables is also an incubator for premier passers and coaches expert in the aerial game.

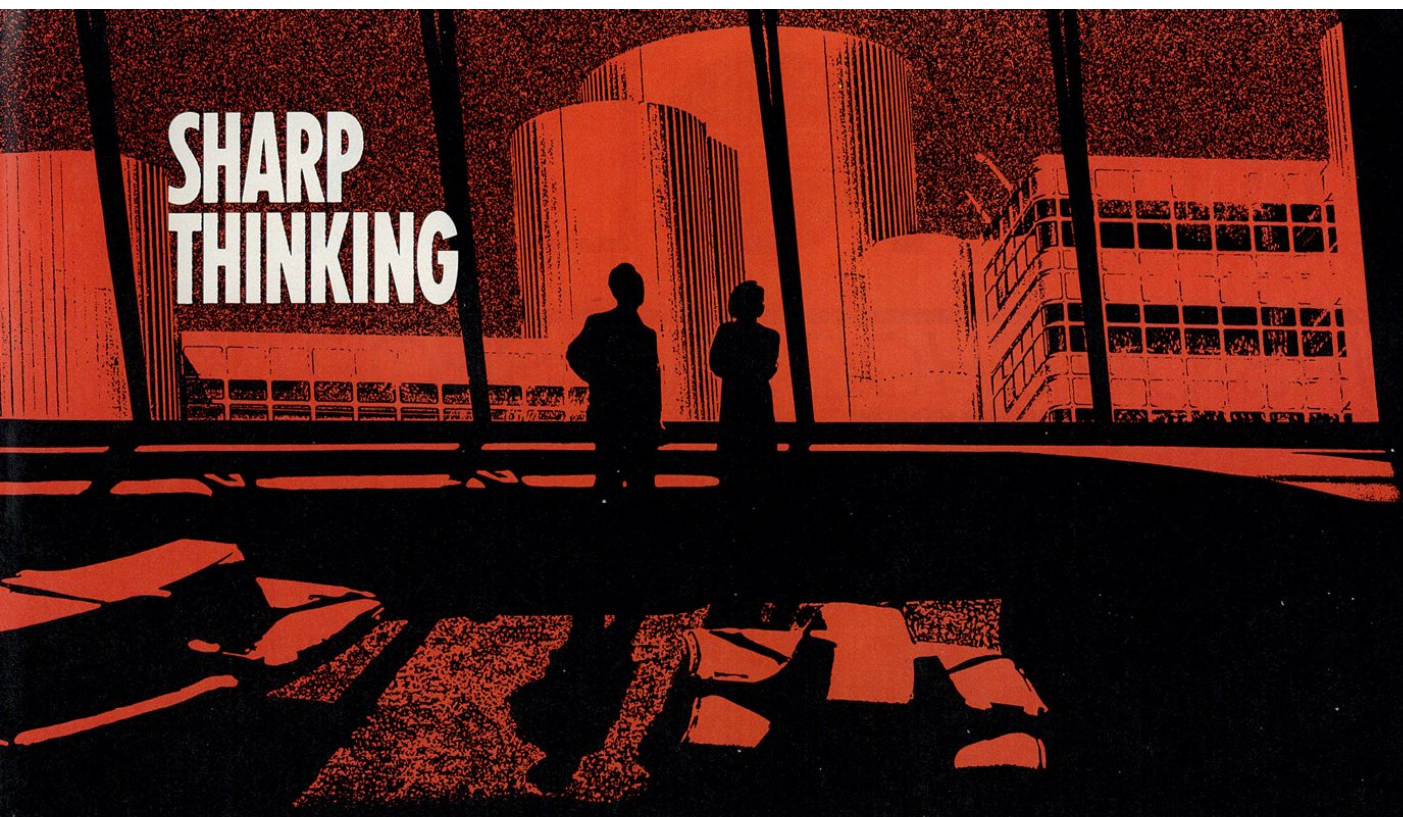

Northern California's dominance in passing has waned in recent years because the entire nation is throwing the football—wit-

Not since 1849 has so much treasure been discovered in Northern California, thanks to a trove of great passing quarterbacks.

THE BAY AIR-EA

During the 1970s, the University of California turned out super QBs Steve Bartkowski (left) and Vince Ferragamo, who played as a freshman and then transferred to Nebraska.

TIPS ON SHOOTING SPORTS

LENSES & ACCESSORIES: AN IMPORTANT PART OF WINNING

What's the difference between a good sports photo and an outstanding sports photo? Most often, it's the equipment. Today's sophisticated camera technology can capture the thrill of sports action like never before, but choosing the right lens or accessory can make all the difference in the world.

For a 35mm autofocus SLR camera, there are four major types of lenses: normal, wide angle, telephoto, and zoom. A 50mm normal lens sees just about the same as your eyes see, with little difference in magnification. For general photography it's great, but for sports action you need more versatility.

A wide angle lens takes in a much greater field of view. A 24mm, 28mm, or 35mm lens is essential if you're working in tight quarters and want to photograph the whole team. Wide angle lenses are also ideal for landscape and scenic photography.

A telephoto lens of 200mm or 300mm has a high magnification and is great for pulling in closeups from a distance. It lets you isolate your subject and provides an additional benefit —a shallow depth of field which can render a distracting background as a soft blur. With a telephoto lens, you could fill the frame with Joe Montana as he fades back for a pass. When using telephoto lenses, it's best to steady the camera as much as possible, or use a tripod. The drawback of a telephoto lens is its fixed focal length.

For the greatest overall versatility at the game, you can use zoom lenses. Today's autofocus zoom lenses give you unparalleled convenience in a compact and lightweight design. They're available in focal lengths from wide angle to short telephoto (28 - 80mm), midrange (80-200mm), or long telephoto (100-300mm). A couple of these in your bag will give you incredible focal length coverage. You could shoot the entire winning play with wide angle group shots, midrange action shots, and closeup full-frame shots. All without leaving your seat!

But here is some real news in sports photography. A major manufacturer's recent advancements in photo technology have created a computer-controlled 35mm autofocus SLR camera that uses motorized autozoom lenses. This remarkable camera/lens combination eliminate the need for manual lens adjustments by automatically zooming to an ideal picture composition the instant the camera is brought to your eye! The eye-start operation and autozoom functions save precious seconds and allow you to capture a split-second expression or play that might otherwise be missed.

If the possibilities of instant picture composition seem amazing, add to that the creative flexibility of camera-programming software cards! Available as optional accessories, one particular card programs the camera to select the highest shutter speed possible for each shot, to freeze sports and other fast action without a blur.

With this kind of unparalleled computer-powered performance now offered in AF SLRs, sports action will be easier than ever to capture in all its glory. And when you think about it, this means you can now get the kind of expert results that used to be limited only to professionals.

"I thought I was too small for IBM and they were too big for me."

"We only needed a network of six PCs and some software, so I bet my partner half a buck IBM couldn't be bothered.

CENTRAL FOOTBALL COACHING STAFF

MIKE DUNBAR — Head Coach (6th year, 45-8-1)

Mike Dunbar begins his sixth season as football coach at Central Washington University this fall.

The 1972 University of Washington grad ranks first among all active NAIA football coaches in winning percentage (.842).

He has a career record of 45-8-1. In each of his five previous seasons, Dunbar has led CWU to Top 20 national rankings, including a No. 1 ranking last fall.

Under Dunbar's direction, CWU has qualified for the national playoffs the past four seasons, twice advancing to the semifinals. CWU takes a 30-game regular-season unbeaten streak into the 1991 season.

Dunbar, 42, was CWU's head coach during the 1983 season and he led the Wildcats to an 8-2 record and a 14th place national ranking.

After three years as an assistant at the University of Massachusetts, he returned in 1987 to guide the Wildcats to a 7-3 record, an eighth place national ranking and a NAIA national playoff berth.

In 1988 CWU posted a perfect 9-0 regular-season mark and was ranked fourth nationally prior to losing in the opening round of the playoffs.

Two years ago CWU posted an 8-0-1 regular-season record and then won two playoff games before losing to eventual national champion Westminster, Pa., in the NAIA Division 2 semifinals. CWU was ranked second in the final NAIA national poll.

The 'Cats moved up to the No. 1 ranking in the third week of the 1990 season and stayed there the rest of the year, finishing with a 9-0 record. After wins over Greenville, Ill., and Pacific Lutheran, CWU again lost to Westminster in the semifinals.

Central has won four straight Columbia Football Association's Mt. Rainer League titles. Dunbar was named the Mt. Rainier League Coach-of-the-Year in 1987 and 1988 and Northwest Small-College Coach-of-the-Year in 1987.

At Massachusetts he helped turn around a perennial losing program. The Minutemen were 3-8 in 1984, then posted 7-4 and 8-3 records in 1985 and 1986.

During his first stint at CWU, which included three years as an assistant, Dunbar was in charge of recruiting and also served as defensive coordinator. He developed the Wildcat defense into one of the stingiest in the country. During the 1981, 1982 and 1983 seasons, CWU allowed an average of just 14.2 points per game.

Since he returned in 1987, Central has won four straight CFA team scoring defense titles and three of four total defense championships. Last fall, CWU ranked fourth nationally in scoring defense and sixth in rushing defense.

Prior to joining the CWU staff for the first time in the fall of 1980, Dunbar was a football assistant at Pacific Lutheran University for three years (1976-78) and head baseball coach at the University of Puget Sound for two seasons (1979-80).

At PLU, he coached the quarterbacks, running backs and wide receivers. In his three seasons, the Lutes won 20 games and lost nine. After CWU posted a 2-7 record in his first season as an assistant here, the Wildcats won 14 games and lost five the next two seasons before he was named head coach.

Dunbar graduated from Lakes High School in Tacoma in 1967 where he lettered in football, basketball and baseball. He played football and baseball at Michigan State and baseball at the University of Washington. He was a defensive back in football and a pitcher in baseball.

He earned a bachelor of science degree from UW in 1972 and a master's in school administration from PLU in 1977.

After graduation from the UW, he taught and coached in the Clover Park school district in Tacoma. He continued to teach at Clover Park after joining the PLU football staff.

After joining the CWU staff, Dunbar also served as an assistant baseball coach in 1981 and was head baseball coach in 1982 and 1983.

Misc.: Born 12-31-48 at Galesburg, Ill. Wife's name is Linda. They have two children, Troy, 12, and Lori Marie, 10.

Today's Schedule: Lewis & Clark at Eastern Oregon, Willamette at Linfield, Oregon Tech at Southern Oregon, Pacific at Puget Sound, Simon Fraser at Pacific Lutheran, Whitworth at Western Oregon, Western Washington at Central Washington.

A lot is at stake today when Central and Western meet for the 78th team here at Tomlinson Stadium.

The Wildcats can wrap an unprecedented fourth straight unbeaten regular-season, their fifth straight Mt. Rainier League title and their second straight NAIA national poll championship with a win.

On top of that, despite an 8-0 record, a 37-game regular-season unbeaten streak and a No. 1 national ranking, CWU still hasn't mathematically clinched a playoff berth.

For the Vikings a win would give them a share of their first Mt. Rainier League title and give them an outside shot at qualifying for the NAIA national playoffs.

Even in nothing was at stake, however, this game would still be a biggie. After all, it's the 'Cats versus the Vikings. Nothing more needs to be said.

The game also has some intriguing matchups statistically.

Central leads the nation in total offense and the Vikings lead the CFA in total defense.

Central ranks second in the CFA in rushing offense and the Vikings are the rushing defense leader and rank sixth nationally.

Central is second nationally in socring. Western ranks third in the CFA in scoring defense.

Western, after losing two of its last four games, has rebounded to win three and tie one of its last four.

The Vikis bring a 4-1 league mark and a 5-2-1 overall record into today's game, while Central is 5-0 in the league and 8-0 overall.

The Vikings

Western could just as easily be 7-1, riding a six-game winning streak and be ranked in the Top 10 as not.

Since losing to Eastern Oregon in its second game of the season, Western has gone 4-1-1. Its loss was a one-point decision to PLU when the Lutes overcame a 21-7 deficit. scoring the winning touchdown on a 72-yard pass with less than one minute to go.

The tie came with Lewis & Clark when a ban snap led to Dan Clemensen's only extra point miss of the season with no time remaining in the game.

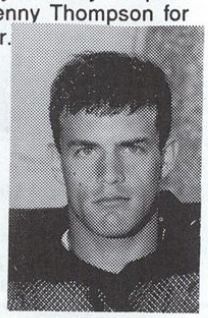

The Viking strength has been defense. Last year they led the CFA in pass defense and this year they've improved against the rush and are allowing just 90.5 yards rushing and 272.5 total yards per game.

Defensive standouts include defensive back Shane Volkmann, who leads the nation in kickoff returns (34.0), and linebacker Lynton Hyde, who is tied for sixth in the CFA in tackles for losses with 11.

Tackle Tom Walters has 10 tackles for losses, while Hyde and linebacker Greg Enell rank 1-2 on the team in tackles with 102 and 66, respectively. Cornerbnack Steve Glover is the team leader in interceptions with three. Glover also ranks fifth nationally in punt returns (14.3).

The Wildcats

Central continues to post some impressive offensive numbers despite playing without its No. 1 quarterback Kenny Stradley the past two weeks and without standout running back Kenny Thompson for most of last Saturday's 38-35 win over Simon Fraser.

Roulst

Beau Baldwin has thrown for 737 yards in the last two games. He established single-game records for passing yards (467), passing attempts (52), completions (32), total plays (66) and total offense (550) in Saturday's win.

His total offense number was the second highest single-game mark in the history of the Columbia Football Association.

Amazingly, despite playing just two full games and parts of six others, Baldwin needs just 150 yards to move into 10th place on CWU's all-time single-season passing list.

The Tacoma sophomore, however, also threw four interceptions for a CFA-record 160 yards in Returns Saturday.

CWU set single-game team marks for first downs (38) and passing first downs (20) in the game. They also eclipsed the single-season marks for passing completions, total offense, touchdowns, points and first downs passing.

Scott Chamberlain tied the single-season mark for punt returns (25) and Darrell Roulst set a new single season mark for PATs made (43) and attempted (45).

Roulst leads the nation in kick scoring, averaging 8.0 points per game. Thompson ranks third in scoring (12.0), while Stradley, who could see some action today, is third in passing and fifth in total offense.

Team-wise Central ranks first in total offense, third in passing and second in scoring.

17 Seniors In Final Regular-Season Home Game

Seventeen seniors complete their regular-season careers today at Tomlinson Stadium and it's been a remarkable run for that group of athletes.

They've never lost a regular-season game in their careers at CWU. Six of the seniors have played four years at CWU and have been part of four years of unparalled success.

Central's 1988 team posted a perfect 9-0 regular-season record. In 1989, Central finished 8-0-1, while last year the 'Cats again won all nine of their regular-season games.

A win today over the Vikings would give CWU another 9-0 perfect season.

The six four-year seniors, part of Mike Dunbar's first recruiting class after returning from the University of Massachusetts where he was an assistant for three years, include Eric Boles, James Mitchell, Tracy McKenzie, John Olson, Steve Scherffius and Eric Lamphere.

Central's other seniors include Derrick Ross, Scott Chamberlain, Spencer Minnix, John Graham, Ken Stradley, Kenny Thompson, Rocky Huff, Bob Hoyman, James Gilmore, David Jagla and Dick Gallaher.

Britton Wildcat-of-the-Week

Offensive tackle Preston Britton was named CWU's Wildcat-of-the-Week for his performance in last week's 38-35 win over Simon Fraser.

Britton, a 6-6, 290 pound lineman from Central Point, Ore., has been a key addition this fall to the 'Cat offensive line, which has enabled CWU to viortually rewrite its offensive record book.

"Preston played all 90 snaps Saturday," CWU offensive line coach Bruce Walker said. "He pass protected very well against some very tough defensive lineman."

Britton transferred to CWU this fall from Oregon Tech where he earned second team Mt. Hood League all-star honors a year ago. "He has been a real force for us on the offensive line," Walker said.

In Saturday's game, Central drove 78 yards in 15 plays, 13 of them passes, to score with four seconds left on a six-yard pass to Eric Boles.

The pass protection of Britton and his cohorts on the offensive line was critical to the drive. Even one sack probably would have meant the end of CWU's four-season unbeaten streak.

"Simon Fraser is a very physical defensive team and Preston was in a one-on-one situation most of the time and he did a great job on that drive," Walker said.

Britton also recovered a fumble early on in the drive. "His alertness on that play gave us the opportunity to have a chance to win the game," Walker said.

The Top 10s

Kenny Thompson, Eric Boles,, Ken Stradley and James Atterberry are making their moves up CWU's all-time single-season and career Toip 10 lists.

Thompson ranks third in scoring (96) and ninth in rushing (845) on the single season chart. He's sixth in career scoring (156) and seventh in career rushing (1455).

Stradley ranks fourth in single-season passing (1566) and total offense (1633), fifth in career passing (2523) and eighth in career total offense (2641).

Boles is seventh in career receptions with 56 and fourth in career receiving yards (1143). He's also sixth in single-season catches (34) and third in single-season receiving yards (648).

Atterberry ranks ninth in both career catches (55) and yards (799). With two seasons left, Atterberry should break all of CWU's career passing records.

The Playoff Picture

Here's why Central hasn't clinched a playof berth and the Vikings still have a shot at the playoffs.

If Western wins today's game and Pacific Lutheran beats Simon Fraser today, then the Vikings, Wildcats and Lutes will finish in a three-way tie for the Mt. Rainier League title.

Central would then earn the league's automatic berth in the playoffs under the tie-breaker criteria and PLU would also likely advance to the 16-team tournament as an at-large team. Western would be out because of an NAIA rule which prevents no more than two teams from any one league from qualifying for the playoffs.

However, if Western wins today and PLU either loses or is tied by Simon Fraser, the Vikings and Wildcats would end in a two-way tie and Western would get the automatic berth (if it is ranked in the Top 20 in tommorrow's final poll) because of its win over CWU.

Then an at-large berth would go to either CWU or PLU, whichever is ranked higher in the final poll. But, because of the two-team rule, one of the two would be eliminated from playoff consideration no matter how high they were ranked.
